Cover Story

The approaching winter and Thanksgiving season bring to mind traditional America and traditional American crafts. One of the most familiar of these crafts is the making of quilted bedcovers. From ancient times through the present, this folk art has been used for clothing, armor, decoration and warmth. As patterns developed they were passed from mother to daughter to friends and neighbors as the quilting bee became a popular feature in every community.

The quilts featured on the cover are from a DAR Museum exhibit selected for their creativity, sense of color and design plus quality of stitching. They were all made in the Washington, D.C. area: “Facets” by Susan McKelvey, Maryland; “White on White with Heirloom Lace” by Anna Dailey Streeter, Maryland; “The Beyer Patch” by Marilyn Titman, Virginia. The cover photo and design are by Deborah Carr, Advertising Manager.
SEALS OF THE NATIONAL SOCIETY OF THE DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

PRESENT SEAL.
DEAR DAUGHTERS,

Thanksgiving Day is a purely American national celebration, the one day of the year when families and friends across the breadth of these United States gather together to rejoice, to “ask the Lord’s blessing,” and to express gratitude to Almighty God for the bounties of His Divine Providence.

President George Washington issued the first proclamation for a day of Thanksgiving on Thursday, November 26, 1789, and that day was set apart “to be devoted by the people of these States to the service of that great and glorious Being who is the benificent Author of all the good that was, that is, or that will be.”

Since those early days, the progress of our Nation toward the good life has been an inspiration to all mankind. The solid rock on which our forefathers built is the Divine precept of the equality of man. On that rock, unparalleled freedoms were conceived and fashioned—liberties which must be guarded jealously.

Pilgrims, Indians, turkeys, cornstalks and pumpkins form a traditional Thanksgiving picture well known to school children. They tell the story of a thankful people who had faith in their God and faith in themselves—the Plymouth colonists—who in 1621 celebrated an early American Thanksgiving Day.

Early patriots from New England to Georgia sought a voice in their destiny and a right for every free man to vote; they fought for that privilege. As a nation, we owe those patriots a debt of gratitude by taking full advantage of this opportunity. I urge and challenge you to join efforts this November to achieve a record vote for the candidates of your choice.

As we count our blessings this Thanksgiving, let us be ever-mindful of those who are deprived of freedom. Especially let us remember the fifty-two Americans who are held hostage in Iran, and let us pray for their safety and release.

Ninety years ago on November 11, 1890, at the third and last organizational meeting of the fledgling National Society, the Constitution of the NSDAR and the first Seal of the Society were adopted. That Seal is pictured on the facing page. At this time of Thanksgiving, let us pause and be grateful for the firm foundation on which our Society, as well as our Nation, was built and on which it stands.

November 11 is significant also because it marks the 62nd anniversary of the official end of World War I. On Armistice Day in 1922 the National Society officially participated in the entombment of America’s Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery. Until 1950, this date, now known as Veteran’s Day, was called Armistice Day.

The Queen of all Graces is Gratitude. May your Thanksgiving Day be filled with Gratitude and Happiness.

Faithfully,

Mrs. Richard Denny Shelby
President General, NSDAR

Thanksgiving

By Sarah Gilbreath
Ferro Monte Chapter, Chester, New Jersey

Thanksgiving Day, like so many great institutions, grew by degrees. Virginia was the site of an early celebration on December 4, 1619 at Berkeley Hundred (now Berkeley Plantation) on the James River about 30 miles from Richmond. Thirty-eight English settlers disembarked from the ship Margaret to follow their instruction: "Wee ordain that the day of our ships arrival at the place assigned for plantacon in the land of Virginia shall be yearly and perpetually kept holy as a day of thanksgiving to Almighty God." Accordingly, they held a thanksgiving service that very day.

Thoughts of Thanksgiving immediately bring to mind the autumn of 1621 when the Pilgrims gathered in their harvest at Plymouth and proceeded with a three-day celebration ordered by Governor Bradford. It must certainly have been a colorful and picturesque festival because Massasoit and other Indian chiefs attended. It has been questioned whether or not this celebration was accompanied by any religious observance.

As time went on, some of the Colonies, Massachusetts Bay, Connecticut, New Netherland, seized upon the idea of an annual festival of thanksgiving. The Continental Congress several times called upon state executives to proclaim days of thanksgiving. After the Colonies became States, President Washington appointed Thursday, November 26, 1789 as a day of thanksgiving observance by Proclamation:

... And, also, that we may then unite in most humbly offering our prayers and supplications to the great Lord and Ruler of Nations, and beseech him to pardon our national and other transgressions; to enable us all, whether in public or private stations, to perform our several and relative duties properly and punctually; to render our National Government a blessing to all the people, by constantly being a government of wise, just and constitutional laws, discreetly and faithfully executed and obeyed; to protect and guide all sovereigns and nations (especially such as have shown kindness to us), and to bless them with good governments, peace and concord; to promote the knowledge and practice of true religion and the virtue, and the increase of science, among them and us; and, generally to grant unto all mankind such a degree of temporal prosperity as he alone knows to be best.

Governor Johns of Virginia issued a proclamation in 1855, and by 1858 at least twenty-seven governors called for the celebration. Since President Lincoln's Proclamation in 1864, Thanksgiving Day has been observed as an annual national holiday, being "the only religious festival celebrated in the United States by the virtue of the authority of civil government."

Thanksgiving Day is more of a "feast day" than any other holiday on our calendar. This stems from the first abundant harvest of our early settlers, coupled with the many new delicacies introduced to them by the Indians. Without the turtles, oysters and other seafood, the wild turkeys and other native bounty, the Pilgrims would have been hard pressed to feed themselves.

Both the Colonists and Indians soon found leeks and garlic (mentioned in the Bible: Numbers:11:5) helped not only flavor but softened their meat, especially venison. Likewise they learned mountain laurel leaves did the same. Today, leaves from the mountain laurel, or sweet bay, continue to dominate the curing and marinating of meats. It was at this early Thanksgiving in 1623 that the Indians shared shad and codfish which were equally enjoyed; but the Colonists really marveled at their oyster and clam bake. Through the ages, fish has been alternating between the food of the poor or the food of the rich. (In ancient Greece, fish was eaten only by the very poor, but as the population started to rise, fresh fish became a luxury available only to the rich).

The Indians bequeath varied, imaginative and indispensable dishes. Many of the most widely used and important foods known in the United States today are of American Indian origin which were shared with the Colonists. They are sold in supermarkets, enjoyed everyday, and often prepared as the Indians did. Such classic Early American dishes as barbeque, steamed lobster, spoon bread, cranberry sauce and mincemeat pie are inherited from the first Americans. Until the discovery of America, the rest of the world knew nothing of such foods as sweet potatoes, tomatoes, pepper, pumpkins or squash, maple sugar and, of course, corn. Without corn, which most Indians regarded as a gift from the gods to be treasured and surronded with ceremony, and which was cooked in numberless ways, the colonization of America might have faltered.

All of us have an equal opportunity in "Sharing the Spirit of Thanksgiving" during this harvest season. The hillsides of our land exhibit magnificent colors of every hue, all agreeably blended—waiting for you to enjoy with others the spirit of Thanksgiving.

Conflict Chess in a Global Mode

BY FRANK R. BARNETT

Mr. Barnett is president of the National Strategy Information Center, a nonpartisan institution organized in 1962 to conduct educational programs relating to national defense, geopolitics and international security affairs. This paper was a part of the Pepperdine University Great Issues series delivered on January 15, 1980.

Is There a Sinister Game?

Let me start with a “provocation.” The real issue today is a game called “conflict chess in a global mode,” and the chessmasters live in Moscow. Russia is marshaling the moves that will affect the economic health of five hundred million people in the United States, Europe and Japan, and may even force the capitalist world into a 1929-style depression. What any President should be focusing his energy upon is the protection of the oil reserves of the Persian Gulf. The most important waterway in the world is not Suez or the Panama Canal; it is the Strait of Hormuz, the exit from the Persian Gulf. And if the Hormuz passage ever is sealed off by local war, by sabotage of tanker traffic, or by the political blackmail of the Soviet superpower, the following events could well ensue:

Number one: Within three months, the mighty engine of Japan Incorporated simply would stop; and in that context, Moscow might “suggest” that Japan’s only means of recovery would lie in breaking off the American defense treaty.

Number two: If the Strait of Hormuz were sealed off, Western Europe shortly would have at least twenty million unemployed rioting in the streets of its major cities; and those jobless masses might well create a tidal wave of so-called Eurocommunism which neither NATO nor the Common Market could survive.

Number three: If Soviet military power, or PLO terrorism, or Communist revolution in Oman, should close down the Strait of Hormuz, America herself would still have access to the oil of Texas, California, Alaska, Nigeria, Mexico and Venezuela. We could of course endure, but gasoline, within a year, might be seven dollars a gallon and some of our factories would shut down. In fact, within ten months, many American industries would falter, since our major trading partners, Japan and Europe, would be in economic collapse, unable to buy our goods.

Of course, this is a worst-case scenario, but before you reject it as being too academic or too pessimistic, consider the Afghan connection. The barren mountains and desert of Afghanistan which separate the Soviet Union from the Khyber Pass and the Arabian Sea have very few natural resources. But Soviet warplanes on Afghan bases are four hundred miles closer to the Strait of Hormuz, whereas they were not “within reach” from Russia herself. Moreover, Soviet helicopter gunships and airborne armies poised in Afghanistan are in Iran’s back garden, ready for the “war of the Khomeini succession.”

The Ayatollah is an old, and reputedly sick man. He already may have partially lost control of the diverse factions in his country. When he goes, the new czars in Moscow may be able to dominate the Iranian succession struggle from their military base in their Afghan colony (or, by subverting Baluchistan, they may create another “colony” which would grant Moscow military “free passage” to the shores of the Arabian Sea). The plight of the American hostages in Tehran is a personal tragedy for them and their families and is of humanitarian concern to us. Their trauma deserves our sympathy and our moral commitment; but their suffering is only a sub-fraction of the bleak fate which could entrap all of us if Moscow causes the demise of democracy and the free market system by her orchestrated “resource war” against the oil of the Middle East, the minerals of Southern Africa, and the raw materials of Latin America.

Possibly only one good can emerge from the tragedy of Iran and Afghanistan, and that would be if the American people (belatedly, late in the fourth quarter of the most important game that ever will be played in our century) finally would perceive that Afghanistan is the psychological equivalent of Pearl Harbor. Then possibly we can rally ourselves for an effort big enough and soon enough to matter.

The “Culture Gap” Between Lenin and Jefferson

President Carter says he changed his mind 180 degrees on the nature and intentions of the Soviet “Militar-Commissar-Complex” after the Afghan gambit. Hopefully, American leaders of business, law, media, banking and education also will now recognize that the Soviets march to a different drummer. It is not the benign thump of a gavel in an Anglo-Saxon court of law. Rather it is the primordial beat from the Tartar steppe. The Brezhnev beguine is an echo of the Mongol march when Genghis Khan’s armies butchered all of central Asia as casually as the Red Army now kills Afghan tribesmen under the “progressive” banners of “scientific socialism.”

Unhappily—and I say this as a professor who is a Republican, a member of the Chamber of Commerce, a believer in free enterprise—some American entrepreneurs, anxious to sell technology to Moscow, still profess to believe the Russians are simply Slavic-speaking graduates of the Harvard Business School. They are not. They are an ideological Mafia in control of an empire with limitless designs on the rest of us, and with the guts, guile and finesse to carry out their ambition. Our political heritage derives from the Magna Carta, Locke and Jefferson. The Soviet legacy is from Genghis Khan, Ivan the Terrible and Lenin. The culture gap is wider, and perhaps more dangerous, than the missile gap.

Strategy of the “Resource War”

At present, roughly 63 percent—three-fifths of the world’s oil—is now nearly encircled by military allies of the Soviet Union: South Yemen, Ethiopia, Syria, Iraq, and Afghanistan. In the Caribbean, Castro’s cadres are in the process of out-flanking the oil resources of Mexico. The arc of crisis is being drawn in our own front yard: Cuba, Nicaragua, Jamaica, El Salvador, Guatemala, an insurrectionary movement in Puerto Rico, and Marxists on the island of Grenada. Moreover, the southern third of Africa, the Saudi Arabia of minerals, is under siege by Marxist guerrillas; and the Soviets already have politico-military bases in Angola and Mozambique.

The twilight battles of the resource war do not put at risk the farms, factories and population of Mother Russia. The Soviet nuclear hammer is field aloft to mesmerize most of us; but meanwhile more quietly, less dramatically, the Soviet Union’s Cuban and East German surrogates, backed by Admiral Gorshkov’s four-ocean navy, are busy sitting astride the fuel and mineral lifelines of the southern hemisphere.

NATO cannot be sustained if the links of a Soviet “shadow commonwealth” are forged in the southern hemisphere to ensure that most of the oceanic choke points can strangle the trade flow of the United States, Japan and Europe. That is the ultimate meaning of the “resource war.” From Moscow’s viewpoint, an undeclared resource war is low cost, low casualty, low visibility, almost below the threshold of Western response (although, France has taken some effective countermoves in Africa. France saved Zaire. The French Foreign Legion still is deployed in six African countries. The French secret services have no guilt complex; they’re still working on behalf of France and [indirectly] on the rest of Western Civilization).

Overview of Five Threats

Soviet gains in the resource war, of course, are related to the overall military balance, the West’s lack of nerve in resisting Moscow’s aggression and America’s failure to compete in the intelligence and propaganda war. Let me review five synergistic threats and then try to offer solutions. Here are at least five separate challenges to our defense posture:

Number one: The vulnerability of the United States’ nuclear deterrent in the early 1980s. About two years from now, the Soviets will open a “window of military opportunity,” a window which will last until about 1986 or ’87. Happily, there is some practical activity taking place in Los Angeles, based on what used to be called Yankee ingenuity, to improvise and innovate special systems that can help close that Soviet window of opportunity, ’82-’86.

Number two: We face the danger of the growing military edge in conventional forces of the Warsaw Pact over NATO (3:1 against us in tanks; 4:1 in artillery; and Soviet SS-20 mis-siles aimed at all of Europe).

Number three: The darkening shadow of the Soviet navy in the southern hemisphere, threatening our access to raw materials.

Number four: The disabling of United States intelligence services in a world in which the KGB is thriving; in which, incidentally, a reborn Gestapo is alive and well and flourishing in Africa under Moscow’s auspices. Moscow now is using the East German Sicherheitsdienst as its control mechanism for the Cubans. The Cubans are too volatile for the Russians. Moscow depends on the revived Gestapo to serve between the Russians and the Cuban infantry as “foremen.” So both the KGB and the Gestapo are vigorous players, while the CIA is partly on the sidelines.

Number five: All of the four previous threats create a “descending spiral of confidence” among friends and allies, in America’s capacity and will to stay in the world arena and meet the full spectrum of challenges from the USSR. The Saudi royal family, for example, is close to despair over Soviet success near their shores: Ethiopia, South Yemen on their southern border, and now Afghanistan. The Japanese have taken the decision to rearm, quietly, but they also are asking themselves, privately, if America is a reliable partner. It would be a tragedy beyond belief if the Japanese should rearm and then decide to become a “third force,” playing off Moscow, Washington and Peking against each other, instead of remaining bound to the free society by a vigorous Alliance. We urgently need Japan to remain on our side, as we do West Germany.

And speaking of West Germany, which is among our sturdiest allies and has made the greatest commitment to NATO, even in Bonn, Germans are beginning privately to remind themselves that the great Brezhnev advised, “Never entirely close the door to accommodation with St. Petersburg.” Much of this uneasiness stems from Washington’s bumbling retreat and indecision, which generates dismay and despondency among our allies.

Enough on the threats. What can we do about them?

The Need For Solutions

I didn’t come all the way across the continent from New York just to socialize my frustrations. Most of you have attended seminars on national defense where you have been "alarmed" by the speakers, and you have done your civic duty by going home and terrorizing your wives with the same information. I myself on occasion have severely lectured my own wife about her failure to prevent Soviet missiles in Cuba or the building of the Berlin Wall. It's time to offer specific things that private citizens themselves can do to prod, push and needle their own government (we also need to push America's giant international labor unions and multi-national corporations into themselves using some muscle and ingenuity to help cope with the Soviet-sponsored resource war).

After all, in the Soviet system all talent is marshaled by totalitarian government. In our society, 80 percent of the talent is in the private sector. And if we're going to play global conflict chess "for real," the private sector is going to have to do more of its share. The hands of the clock of Western Civilization's destiny are now at about twenty minutes to midnight. On the more positive side, the ingenuity, power and vitality of a pluralistic, free enterprise society can be irresistible once leadership groups have been aroused—and I do not hesitate to speak about elites; elites have always carried civilization forward in every society.

Of course, without access to secret intelligence a private citizen is at some disadvantage in offering suggestions to the President or the Secretary of State on what options are feasible. On the other hand, too often the State Department, particularly, uses the mystique of presumed "inside" information as an excuse for inaction. As a retired corporal of the infantry I have few inhibitions. So here are my draft blueprints for what should be done. I say "draft" deliberately; they are my suggestions designed to inspire improvements or better ideas from this audience. My premise is that private Americans no longer can sit passively on the sidelines hoping the President won't fumble when the Soviets blitzkrieg the quarterback.

Weapons to Asian Allies

First of all, let all of us, Democrats and Republicans together, support the President and Secretary of Defense in what now seems to be their initiative to upgrade the weapons of China and Pakistan. I say "seems" because, while the rhetoric sounds good so far, the actual transfer of the weapons has yet to take place. So private citizens should say to the President, via their congressmen, "Mr. President, we hope this time you are not simply holding aloft your umbrella of moral rhetoric, under which you zig-zag and reverse the field. You must do something more tangible than calling off the Olympics, although that is a useful first step. But you cannot stop the Russians on the cheap; you cannot hope that others will bear most of the risks."

Forward Bases in the Middle East

The citizenry of this Republic who are interested in defense might offer recommendations to their own senators: "Mr. Senator, why don't you suggest that the White House insert the 82nd Airborne Division into the Khyber Pass along with 5,000 anti-tank missiles, as both a symbolic and tangible shield for Pakistan? Why not also put two regiments of Marines into Oman to shield both the Sultan of Oman and the Saudis from the Soviet-Cuban buildup in South Yemen?" Oman, of course, commands one shore of the Strait of Hormuz. We should also deploy American war planes on the island of Masirah, very close to the Strait of Hormuz, giving us, in effect, a permanent aircraft carrier in the Arabian Sea. We also should ask the Saudi royal family if they would like United States' special forces in Saudi Arabia to help prevent insurrection by PLO-trained cadres or guerrilla warfare sponsored from South Yemen. We likewise should explore with President Sadat the feasibility of both an American air base in the Sinai and a naval base in Alexandria. And why not a U.S. military base in Israel as well?

Military "Signals" to the Russians

We should consider deploying the neutron weapon on the NATO front as another tangible signal to the Russians. They will understand the deployment of the neutron weapon better than bombardment of the Iranian embassy in Washington with Christmas cards. The Russians calculate power, not sentiment. And since the American taxpayers are supplying Chrysler with one and a half billion dollars in subsidies, Washington might ask Chrysler to convert part of its production lines to turning out cruise missiles like sausages. We might even leak our intentions to consider transfer of short-range cruise missiles and anti-tank weapons to China if Moscow goes beyond Afghanistan against Pakistan, Iran or Yugoslavia.

Also—since the "indirect approach" in conflict is often more effective than head-on violence—we should punish Russia by supplying arms to the Blacks in Angola who still are fighting Moscow's proxies, the Cubans. The anti-Communist forces of UNITA under Jonas Savimbi would like to have anti-tank and anti-helicopter weapons to get rid of the brutal Cuban mercenaries whom Andy Young once called a "stabilizing force" in Africa. By helping freedom-loving Blacks in Africa kill Cuban oppressors in Angola, we would signal Havana that being Russia's jackal is not a risk-free profession.

Upgrading U.S. Intelligence

Let me now describe private citizen activities that conceivably could be followed by other influential groups. Something positive is being done to reestablish CIA capabilities, which, if we had them today, would give us a nonmilitary option in world trouble spots. As you know, in the wake of Watergate and Vietnam, Congress enervated many of the sins of the FBI and the CIA. We no longer have very effective counterintelligence or covert capability. The Hughes-Ryan Act compels the Director of the CIA to report in advance a proposed clandestine activity to eight committees of Congress, which means, in total, about 150 Congressmen and their staffs. And the staffs do not necessarily have security clearance. Naturally, a responsible CIA official hesitates to authorize a clandestine operation. The possibility of leakage is too dangerous. But, what is being done about this self-inflicted wound?

First, I want to salute America's lawyers. Although I am not a lawyer, I've been privileged for twenty years to consult with a committee of the ABA, now called the Committee on Law and National Security, which was set up by the Honorable Lewis F. Powell, Supreme Court Justice, and former president of the American Bar Association. Under the leadership of a Chicago attorney, Morris I. Leibman, the Committee on Law and National Security of the ABA is conducting research on the need to improve intelligence. It is holding seminars for law professors, attorneys, businessmen, and the media on the whole intelligence problem. It is doing a study for Congress, and has intervened usefully in the intelligence reform debate now raging on Capitol Hill. The other day President Carter and Dr. Brzezinski seemed to be arguing that we have to get back into the covert capability game. Excellent! Let all Republicans and Democrats support the President on that issue.

Secondly, scholars from twenty-five major universities, including Harvard, Georgetown, Stanford and USC have formed the Consortium for the Study of Intelligence to bring new national security perspectives to the task of upgrading our intelligence arm. Both the ABA Committee and the Consortium are cooperating with the dedicated professionals in AFIO, the Association of Former Intelligence Officers, and their voices are being heard in policy circles. All of us—lawyers, scholars, businessmen, editors, labor leaders—could upgrade National Defense by bringing pressure on Washington to use our existing media resources to indict Moscow in the court of world opinion for its Afghanistan invasion and its use of the born-again Gestapo to penetrate Africa and the Middle East. Radio Liberty, Radio Free Europe and the Voice of America have, for the most part, become mild-mannered news programs. They no longer really "attack" the tyranny of Moscow. Is it not curious that so-called American "propaganda" weapons are milder in their criticism of Moscow than Mr. Carter and Senator Kennedy are of each other? Why not wage political war against declared enemies?

Military "Quick Fixes"

In Los Angeles a private initiative was born two years ago that provides a bonus for the entire nation. It is under the direction of a brilliant professor at USC, Dr. William Van Cleave, who heads up the Strategic Alternatives team, comprised of aerospace scientists and engineers. I spoke earlier of the Soviet "window of military opportunity" between '82 and '86. Many large-scale weapons systems in progress may take about eight years to develop and up to ten billion dollars to complete. They will come on stream in '87 and '88. Meanwhile, what do we do to shut the window between '82 and '86? Two years ago, Dr. Van Cleave and his team of scientists began asking the question: "In extremity, if finally the American people woke up, if the American President and Secretary of Defense said, 'We've got to have something quick,' what could be done in eighteen months for three hundred million dollars, instead of what could be done in eight years for ten billion dollars?"

They have published a book called Strategic Options for the Early Eighties: What Can Be Done?, by Van Cleave and W. Scott Thompson. It lists about seven promising "quick fix" options which, at bearable cost, could be put in place in time to close the Soviet window of opportunity. One is to quickly produce a "derivative" B-1 warplane. The President cancelled the B-1 bomber. Rockwell International, on its own, went ahead with a modest research program. A "derivative" B-1 now costs one third less than the original B-1 and can be armed with air-launched cruise missiles. A derivative B-1 strategic weapons launcher probably could be in place by late '82 or early '83. By way of contrast, the much advertised MX racetrack system will not be ready until 1987 or '88, at an ultimate cost of about sixty billion dollars. The MX missile itself is very useful, but the bizarre basing system—distorted by SALT 2—may turn out to be the equivalent of a herd of white dinosaurs. The racetrack basing mode will be vulnerable to an improved generation of Soviet missiles with even greater accuracy. It will be obsolete before it is deployed and at the cost of sixty billion dollars. Surely, we can do better things with that money by buying a diversity of "quick fix" defenses.

For example, although it's not very elegant, you can fire naval missiles off of ordinary dump trucks parked in the Pyrenees, Hebrides, the Black Forest or the mountains of Norway, Greece and Turkey. Ground-launched cruise missiles from trucks are practical and inexpensive. But as one young naval officer rather wryly observed, "Technically it's feasible, but no admiral would want to be known as 'Cine-Dump Europe.' " But if fleets of dump truck missile carriers could deter Soviet adventurism, we'd better scrap protocol and deploy them.

What else can be done if we dare to innovate? The Navy in 1958 conducted the following test: It took a land missile to sea in a ship (think of a giant telephone pole with a flotation collar around its throat) and pushed the thing overboard. The missile righted itself in the water with the flotation collar; then, when the ship was backed off several miles, its sealed canister was fired. The missile took off beautifully, using nothing but the surface of the sea as a launch platform. Furthermore, today, when we have new satellite technology which can communicate with the brain of a water-launched missile and redirect it, correct it, give it new guidance, we could put missiles on ships in the South Pacific, the Tasmanian Sea or the Indian Ocean and dump them over the sides of either naval or merchant ships (the latter staffed, of course, by naval officers). So, hydro-launched weaponry is now possible if you're prepared to fight protocol and bureaucracy, and even kick some of your military friends in the shins. Water-launched systems, by the way, would take the target away from U.S. soil; whereas the MX racetrack silos offer an incentive to Soviet "first-strike" zealots to saturate our Western states with nuclear weapons whose fallout would follow the weather route back across the Middle West to the East.

We could also put U.S. sea-launched cruise missiles on fifty submarines already in existence which belong to Britain, Belgium, Germany and Italy. Those submarines are now committed to anti-submarine warfare; so configured, they carry twenty-four torpedoes each. You could leave twenty torpedoes on each vessel, take four off, and add four sea-launched cruise missiles per vessel. That gives you two hundred deadly weapons which can reach into western Russia against the mobile SS-20 and Backfire bases. For a few hundred million dollars, which is walking-around money in the aerospace field, in eighteen months you could have a whole new weapon system to add insurance to the survival of the West.

Some of the generals, admirals and civilians in the Pentagon say, "Well, we can't really do that; we're wedded to other long-term programs." Nonsense! The time has come when conservatives—as well as liberals—must criticize the Pentagon. Not with repect to the Pentagon’s mission; we all subscribe to the aim of defending this country and its allies against Russian power. But the Pentagon bureaucracy—like bureaucracies in business, welfare, labor and academic life—will improve performance with selective needling. What the Pentagon needs are friendly Ralph Naders not hostile nay-sayers, constructive critics who force the Services and the civilian “defense intellectuals” to re-examine their premises. More money on even more sophisticated—and hard to maintain—systems doesn’t always equate to better defense. We need at least one segment of the Pentagon to think “lean, quick and dirty,” not “fat, elegant and next decade.”

Patriots must support stronger national defense, but that support should be discriminating. Upon occasion, and without rancor, some of us in the private sector must try to force reassessment of the “means” of defense, because the Soviet window of military opportunity, ’82 to ’86, probably cannot be closed by normal, routine, business-as-usual, orthodox processes. Expediency may dictate that we must sustain most existing production lines. But we also must innovate, take chances, improvise, ingeniously assemble existing hardware off of different shelves in a new mode, and “reclaim” underused research and development. American ingenuity can block that Soviet window of opportunity.

A Naval Alliance of the Southern Oceans

Let me conclude by describing a plan to cope with the Soviet-sponsored resource war, aimed at severing the “capitalist connection” to the fuel tanks of the Persian Gulf and the mineral reservoirs of Africa. It’s now thirty years since America helped to transform world affairs with the Marshall Plan and NATO. We have been living off the diplomatic capital of those political innovations for thirty years and it’s partly run-down. As we have seen, NATO no longer can defend its energy and mineral flanks in the Mid-East and Africa. Looking forward to the next thirty or even fifty years, it may be time for a new initiative on the scale of NATO and the Marshall Plan. NATO, of course, must be preserved; it’s our blue chip alliance. I’m talking not about a substitute for NATO, but about something that would be complementary.

The new plan can be summed up by the term “Tri-Oceanic Alliance” (the concept of an Oceans Alliance was first outlined by Dr. Ray S. Cline, the Center for Strategic and International Studies, Georgetown University, in his book, World Power Assessment 1977). A Tri-Oceanic Alliance would be a military alliance of key states on the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian Oceans, a chain of sea-linked, NATO-type alliances of states, all of which are threatened either directly by Soviet military power or indirectly by Soviet surrogates: Cuba, East Germany, Vietnam and North Korea.

Why do we need a Tri-Oceanic Alliance? The old policy of “containment,” which was successful under Truman and Eisenhower, depended on United States nuclear and naval superiority, bipartisan foreign policy, American resolve and the supremacy of the dollar. Most of those assets have dwindled. Soviet strategic power plus her four-ocean navy cannot be contained by the United States alone. NATO is now a bit flabby, owing to Eurocommunism, disputes among the allies and European doubts about Washington’s wisdom. SEATO, our former alliance in the Pacific, is dead; it went out of business in June of 1978. CENTO, the Middle East alliance, is dead; Iran and Iraq were the centerpiece. The Rio Pact in Latin America is frayed. And much of the Third World is menaced by instability, terrorism and the growing shadow of Soviet power.

The United States, Europe and Japan all depend heavily on the raw materials of the Southern Hemisphere outside the parameters of NATO. As we have seen, the Russians with their proxies are waging a low-visibility resource war; and the whole non-Communist world is drifting toward disarray and despondency. In that context, we need to create a “life raft of hope and confidence” both for ourselves and for our allies. We’ve got to stop simply focusing on Soviet strengths and Soviet gambits and think about Free World collective resources. Otherwise, we fall prey to creeping defeatism.

Linking Russia’s Three Fronts in Collective Defense

At present, the Soviet Union faces west toward NATO, south toward the Persian Gulf, and east toward Japan. Happy is the Soviet military planner, because his three fronts are unconnected and, therefore, Russia can lean against a victim of opportunity on the periphery, knowing that there will be no retaliation from the other flanks. But the Russian bear will be more cautious once he sees that Japan, West Germany, Australia, the United States, Brazil and most of NATO are united via the Tri-Oceanic Alliance. Hence, we should summon forth in the Southern Hemisphere a great Tri-Oceanic Alliance that will link the Soviet Union’s three fronts in hoops of defensive steel.

Possible Members for TOA

The core states of that Tri-Oceanic Alliance might be: the United States, Venezuela, Canada, Mexico, Argentina and Brazil; Britain, Belgium, France, West Germany, Spain, Portugal and Italy; Egypt, Israel, Turkey, Saudi Arabia, Pakistan; Japan, Australia, Indonesia, Thailand, South Korea, Singapore, Taiwan, and hopefully the Philippines; and then in Africa, if men of good will can arrange the human relations of the matter, the new emerging Zimbabwe-Rhodesia, Nigeria, Kenya and South Africa should be invited to participate, as well as Somalia, Morocco and the Sudan. Eventually, we’re talking about 20-35 countries binding the Pacific, Indian Ocean and Atlantic “fronts” of the Soviet Union in collective defense. This hypothetical listing is not meant to reflect adversely on states not named. In the case of Greece, Norway and the Netherlands, for example, regardless of the desirability of their membership, one fears that current internal politics would inhibit their governments from making a military commitment to defend the Persian Gulf. If, in time, the political climate inside various states made possible the evolution of a wider geopolitical role, TOA should be ready to enlarge its community.

TOA also might be the overarching framework inside which Israel and Egypt each could find sufficient military and psychological security to fully consummate their own peace pact. Perhaps in the longer term, depending on political trends, one even might hope that India and the People’s Republic of China might consider associate membership. The eventual shape and nature of TOA, however, should not stand in the way of an immediate effort to enlist an “executive group” of perhaps not more than ten states whose combined manpower, resources, technology and geography would enable them to block Soviet gambits to seal off Mid-East oil and cartelize African and Latin American minerals in the COMECON/WARSAW PACT complex.

Is TOA the Impossible Dream?

The normal first reaction is to label TOA as “the impossible dream.” On second thought, many perceive that, to rally the morale of the remnants of the non-Communist world, it is imperative to (a) play our collective strength in military science, technology, commerce, development capital, food resources and combined naval power, and (b) start a public debate on a strategy of sufficient magnitude to avert a further series of disasters. America alone bore the overwhelming burden of launching NATO and the Marshall Plan; but, in helping to create a Tri-Oceanic Alliance, the U.S. would have potential partners of vast affluence and technical skill. In 1950, our allies were in rubble and ruin. Today, the high technology and wealth of Japan, Germany and our other European allies are enormous assets. We even might recall the wisdom of Winston Churchill, who observed that to bring forth a new alliance might weigh more in the balance of history than winning a battle by oneself.

Advantages of TOA

What would such an Alliance give us? A five-to-one advantage in gross national product over the Soviet Union; nearly ninety percent of the world’s management, engineering and scientific know-how; a three-to-one superiority in naval power as Japan rearms and puts the Japanese fleet along with an American, British and West German fleet in the Arabian Sea; sixty percent of the world’s oil reserves; eighty percent of the world’s food exports from the United States, Australia, Argentina and Canada (that’s a greater dominance in food than OPEC has in oil). Also, TOA would have sixty-five percent of the key minerals and raw materials. Finally, why not commando units of Turks, Pakistanis and South Koreans put ashore by Tri-Oceanic fleets against the Cubans? Why should we allow the Soviets to have a monopoly on volunteer legions? Of course, the U.S. also would provide fighting men and a repaired nuclear umbrella. We are not talking about “recruiting Hessian mercenaries,” but arming and standing fast with full partners.

Now, if we’re serious people (not too steeped in affluence, pornography and the mindless pursuit of pleasure to think in geopolitical terms), we can begin to manage our own survival. The potential assets of TOA are vast. The Russians, for all their aggressive tendency, essentially are calculating and cautious. If they are confronted with overwhelming power on every periphery, they are not likely to take the chance that will bring on nuclear war. They were relatively well behaved under Truman and Ike, because we had the military edge and they knew it. So let’s not tempt Moscow into further adventurism by failing to reconstruct a formidable collective defense.

Practical First Steps

How does one bring a Tri-Oceanic Alliance into being? That can be done only by state-to-state agreements. It would have to be done by an American President and an American Secretary of State who understood the combat mentality of the Soviet Union and were willing to provide decisive leadership. But politicians of both parties, and foreign offices, and State Department officials need to be pushed. Public opinion, as we know, can help to change government priorities. So why not pick fifteen major American cities and set up in each an Oceanic Alliance Roundtable of fifty to seventy prominent men and women? Their business would be to push, publicize and promote the concept of joint and combined defense of the Persian Gulf by Japan, Germany, Britain, the United States, Canada, Australia, etc. Roundtable members would write articles, make speeches, buttonhole congressmen and senators.

Already there are such committees in formation in Tokyo, Paris and London. Some allies are ahead of us. They’re closer to the resource war in Africa. They’re more vulnerable to Persian Gulf instability. They’re hoping that American leadership groups will join with groups in NATO and the Pacific theater. Within six to eight months, there might be twenty cities (including eight in overseas areas) with an Oceanic Alliance Roundtable pushing for this kind of mutual defense strategy.

Action in Progress

The fact that citizen initiative is feasible is indicated by the following events: (1) in December of 1979, in Thailand, ten Asian countries (including Japan, Australia and Indonesia) joined with Americans to begin discussing the need for a “NATO of the Pacific” which might consider the need to extend its defense perimeter to the Persian Gulf from whence the energy of many Pacific states is chiefly derived. (2) In Paris in November 1980, leaders of the French Patronat (like our Chamber of Commerce plus the National Association of Manufacturers) are sponsoring a conference on “La Guerre de Resource,” the Resource War. They’re going to invite Germans, Britons, Japanese, Spaniards and Italians. They want Americans to come. (3) In Pittsburgh in June 1980, chief executive officers of local corporations and members of the World Affairs Council sponsored a conference called “How To Cope With the Resource War: Raw Materials and Sea Power.” (4) In Washington, D.C., trade association officials concerned with the resource war are organizing the Council on Economics and National Security (CENS). The Executive Director of CENS is Rear Admiral William C. Mott, USN (Ret.), who also serves on our National Strategies Information Center Board.

Conclusion

Despite the relentless buildup of Soviet armaments, the Communist wave of the future is no more likely to succeed than the Nazi bandwagon that collapsed more than a generation ago, provided that we take personal and “institutional” responsibility to convert the singular assets of the free society into working options. If we repair our deterrents and field a new Alliance, we can take comfort in the fact that the long-term ideological battle is tilting against Moscow (no one should ignore the struggle of values dramatized by the Pope’s welcome in “Communist” Poland). Moreover, for all its missiles and warships, the Soviet Empire still is weakened by rival nationalism. Millions of the non-Russian peoples of the USSR

Maryland

Senator Charles McM. Mathias, Jr. of Maryland recognized the 75th Anniversary of the Maryland State Society at the February 26, 1980 session of the United State Senate. Copies of his statement, as printed in The Congressional Record, were given to everyone who attended the Maryland State Conference March 13, 14, and 15.

The Senator invited Mrs. E. Donald Dietrich, State Regent, and Mrs. Charles A. Bloedorn, Vice Regent, to his office in the Russell Senate Office Building to receive a framed copy which has been placed in the Chapter House in Baltimore.

Quoted from The Congressional Record:
Mr. Mathias. Mr. President, the Maryland Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution will celebrate its 75th anniversary the weekend of March 13 in Baltimore.
Formed just 10 years after the national DAR, the State society has shown a continuing dedication to fulfilling the promises of the organization’s triennial nationwide themes. “A Tapestry of Service” is the current theme, as the national unity of the DAR is symbolized by the many threads of a tapestry woven together to make a complete picture.

The Maryland Society of the DAR is a most significant thread in that picture. Over 3,100 members in the State’s 53 chapters are active in both community and national DAR programs. The Maryland society’s projects have included placing historical markers around the State at important but sometimes forgotten sites. For example, on Independence Day, 1978, the State DAR marked the grave of Thomas Stone, one of the four Maryland signers of the Declaration of Independence. Original markings on his grave, located on the family estate in Habre-de-Venture in Charles County, had washed away. DAR contributions completely financed the new landmark.

In addition, the State society purchased the signatures of Stone and the three other Marylanders who signed the Declaration of Independence, Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Thomas Paca, and Samuel Chase. Those original signatures are now on display in the Americana room of the DAR national headquarters here.

I congratulate the Maryland society, which, for 75 years, has exemplified the dedication of the National Daughters of the American Revolution, an organization with a tapestry of service that weaves its way throughout our land.

Two amendments to the Bylaws were adopted: (1) A Life Membership was created with a fee of $25.00. (2) The President was authorized to appoint an Assistant Treasurer (if needed) with the approval of the Treasurer.

The Historian, Mrs George Smythe, displayed a beautiful book giving information on the organization and activities of the Club during the year.

The following officers were elected: Mrs. Charles C. Haig, President; Mrs. D. Edwin Gamble, Vice President; Miss Amanda Thomas, Chaplain; Mrs. U. Amel Rothermel, Recording Secretary; Mrs. Herbert Forrest, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. Mernie McGrea, Treasurer; Mrs. George Smythe, Historian.

Rhode Island
They were warm, happy places, the inns and taverns of colonial days. Within their sturdy walls the hard working colonists found cheery fires, stimulating drinks, hearty foods and opportunities to exchange news and gossip. But so many no longer exist! Eroded by neglect, greed, and ignorance of their history, they have fallen to the wrecker's ball—an irreplaceable loss!

Our boisterous young frontier society considered the tavern the man's club. There a man could sit, smoke his pipe, drink his pint of grog and talk to travelers or the local people who dropped in. The tavern was seldom patronized by the well-to-do, although records seem to indicate that George Washington visited so many that it is a wonder he ever got home to Mount Vernon and Martha.

Preachers called the public house a "den of iniquity," but it was often built near the village meeting house or church. After listening to hours of Sunday sermons in cold, drafty rooms, the colonists needed a place where all could gather for warmth, food and companionship.

Taverns located on major highways served travelers who brought with them news of the outside world. They might also bring letters for local people. These were posted on the tavern's walls with notices of auctions, sales and military orders. An educated innkeeper would often have to read them to his illiterate patrons.

Prices were regulated by law. A full meal was 12 pence and a quart of beer was a penny. A landlord could be fined if he overcharged or if the quality of the liquor was inferior.

As to liquor, well, it must be said that the tap room was a very busy place. Here the contented colonists were served fascinating drinks like Black Strap (rum and molasses), Grog (rum and water), Toddy (rum, hot water and sugar stirred with a toddy stick), Flip (strong beer, sugar and a gill of rum stirred with a "loggerhead"—a heated iron poker), or a Yard of Flannel (a pint of ale plus eggs, sugar, cinnamon and rum).

An early English visitor, Captain Frederick Marryat, reported, "Americans can fix nothing without a drink. If you meet, you drink; if you part, you drink. They drink because it is hot, they drink because it is cold. If they win an election they drink and rejoice; if they lose they drink and swear. They drink early and late. They begin drinking early and continue until they drop into the grave." It is interesting to speculate as to the number of taverns Captain Marryat had to visit to acquire all that information.

The passing years took their toll of the old public houses. Some just wore out, others were destroyed by fires or similar disasters. A small number were gently cared for all their years, but many had to be rescued and brought back to useful life.

Fortunately for us, some of the colonial inns and taverns still standing have been lovingly restored, or rebuilt on their original foundations with painstaking attention to their original features. Some are private homes, others are museums, and a few are still working taverns.

That they still stand is a tribute to the public spirited men and women who recognized in them an important link to our early history and who spent an enormous amount of time, effort and money restoring them.

A glowing example of the resurrection of a historic public house is Fraunces Tavern in New York City. Begun as a three-story house in 1719, it became the Queen's Head Tavern in 1763. As one can imagine, the name didn't last long. After the Revolution it was renamed for its owner, Samuel Fraunces. Here, a stream of distinguished guests enjoyed delicious foods, including fresh shad, but when Washington learned that the fish cost $2.00 a pound, he exclaimed, "Take it away! It shall never be said that I indulged in luxuries so expensive as this!"

In 1900 the degenerating tavern was acquired by a patriotic society. In 1965 it won Landmark status, and today is beautifully renovated. The famous Fraunces Tavern Restaurant is on the first floor; with the second and third floors being maintained by the Sons of the Revolution in New York as a museum.

destroyed by a disastrous fire in 1858, several important events made possible the excellent reconstruction of the famous Raleigh Tavern in Williamsburg, Virginia. First was the identification of the foundation, much of which was intact, and walls that rose four or five feet above ground level. Second was the location of an inventory of furnishings and equipment tallied in 1771. And, finally, the discovery of sketches and writings by historian Benson Lossing, which made it possible to recreate the famous Apollo Room. It was in that lovely room that Thomas Jefferson tells us that he lost his first love, Belinda.

Today visitors are welcomed to rooms that are proportionately accurate and are furnished in much the manner they were in colonial days. Guides may also relate some of the amusing events which occurred there, like the party at which Bishop James Madison, an uncompromising patriot, refused to speak of the kingdom of God. He referred to it as "the great Republic of God, where all men are equal!"

Also in Colonial Williamsburg is Christina Campbell's Tavern. Set in colorful, tranquil gardens, the lovely restored house is admired by its many visitors. In its early days it must have been a delightful place. George Washington filled his diaries with stories of the excellent meals and lodgings there.

We understand, however, that Martha Washington had little cause for jealousy. As recorded by a traveler, the landlady was "a little woman about four feet high and equally thick, a turned up Pug nose and a mouth screwed up to one side." Maybe it was her delicious Spoon Bread that kept him coming to the tavern.

One of the few taverns that is now a private home is Sheldons on North Street in Litchfield, Connecticut, which dates from 1760 and was designed by London architect, William Spratt. Washington's diary records his spending a night there and, undoubtedly two famous Litchfield residents, Ethan Allan and Aaron Burr, were guests there.

In New Jersey, the Indian King Tavern was built in 1750. A wealthy ship owner erected the sturdy, three story house on the King's Highway in Haddonfield. Today it looks much as it did then, with even the original locks on the doors.

Once it was the home of Dolley Payne, niece of the innkeeper, before she married James Madison and became one of the most popular of White House hostesses. Possibly she acquired her gracious hospitable ways while assisting her uncle at the Indian King.

"Light Horse" Harry Lee, father of Robert E. Lee, and one of Washington's favorite officers, was a frequent and most welcome visitor here. As a twenty-one year old officer, with only seven men, he routed over two hundred British horsemen who had been sent to capture him at another popular Patriot rendezvous, the Spread Eagle Tavern in Pennsylvania. For this great feat Washington gave him authority to form his own company, Lee's Legion.

Like other taverns, the Indian King suffered with the passage of time. By 1900 it was abandoned, a shelter for vagrants. Thanks to public spirited citizens, it was acquired by the state and designated a historic site. It is...

now a beautifully restored museum.

Newport, Rhode Island, too, boasts of its famous old tavern, the Pitts Head. Built in 1726 on Washington Square, it played host to Patriot, British and French officers during the Revolution. Now this 2 1/2 story, gambrel roof, center chimney, frame house has been splendidly restored and is regarded as a historic treasure by residents and visitors alike.

Two taverns in Massachusetts, both dating from about 1695 and only a mile apart, were linked by the historic events of the Revolution as no others. From Buckman Tavern on the Lexington Green in April, 1775, alerted by Paul Revere, Captain Jonas Parker and his Minute Men stormed out to confront the advancing English soldiers. Eight Americans died in that confrontation and, with a British soldier, were buried in a common grave near the Green.

On the same night Monroe Tavern, a mile away, was ransacked by the British. The tavern had been commandeered by Earl Percy to use as a temporary hospital for his wounded soldiers. The English were in an ugly mood, smashing barrels of liquor and shooting up the tavern. Before they retreated they killed the temporary innkeeper, John Raymond, and set fire to the place. The fire was put out, but even today visitors can see holes from the musket balls in the ceiling.

Buckman and Monroe Taverns, after careful research, have been faithfully restored and are now open to the public.

To visit Gadsby's Tavern in Alexandria, Virginia, is a true delight. Built in 1770, and added to in 1792, the tavern is fully restored as a museum and as a working colonial tavern.

In its early years it provided lodgings and meals for stagecoach passengers and travelers and served as a meeting place for colonial patriots. George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Marquis de Lafayette were among its most famous guests. Five First Ladies, from Martha Washington to Betty Ford, have also been entertained here.

Today visitors tour the elegant ballroom where Washington held his birthday balls (Gadsbys has the original 1799 guest list), the assembly room, bedrooms, gaming room (where the colonists played "Loo," checkers, chess, dominoes and cards), and the wine cellar. After the tour they are welcomed to the spacious dining room by costumed waiters and waitresses who offer authentic colonial dishes such as oysters Alexandria, Old Town Veal, roast duck with madeira wine sauce, English rabbit and Yorkshire pudding.

Each November colonial regiments reenact George Washingtons 1798 military review in front of the tavern, a part of Alexandria's effort to bring the historic past into the present.

Beekman Arms in Rheinbeck, New York, is almost three hundred years old. It originated as a small public house called Traphagan's Tavern in 1700, and its owners built it sturdy enough to withstand Indian raids. At first, the only comforts it offered were a drink, a warm meal and a sheepskin in front of the fire.

Later, its owners built an addition and added extra comforts, like bedrooms with real beds. Unfortunately, there were usually two beds to the room, and the first person in bed was almost sure to be awakened during the night by the landlord, candle in hand, with another guest or two to share the bed. Objectors were looked on as obnoxious and unreasonable. Rates were standard: one person to a bed, 6 pence; two person, 3 pence, 3 farthings; and three or more slept free.

John Fry, a traveler, wrote home as follows: "My dearest wife: I am forced to share this room with three other men, being bedded with one of prodigious height and carried the combined scent of all animals known to God!"

Today, the Beekman Arms, proudly calling itself "America's Oldest Hotel," retains much of its early atmosphere and charm. Although it remembers its former eminent visitors, it prefers to live in the present and serve its guests with the elegance and bounty of the past.

The Golden Plough Tavern in York, Pennsylvania, a unique, half-timbered, two-story house, survives today as part of a group of historic buildings saved from demolition, restored and filled with period furnishings.

Zealous York collectors had begun gathering early Germanic artifacts before 1920 and were delighted when the tavern was acquired by the Historical Society of York in 1960 so that their treasures could be properly displayed.

Undoubtedly the tavern served many of the delegates to the Continental Congress in YOrk in 1777-78. The home of General Horatio Gates was next door, and history tells us that Washington, Lafayette and many other distinguished visitors were entertained there.

During the period York County was actually the first Capital of the United States because the Articles of Confederation, forging thirteen states into the United States in Congress Assembled, were adopted there.

Visitors to the tavern can't help but be impressed by the excellent restoration work and the number of authentic articles that furnish the rooms.

Today, as we look back, we see the vital role the colonial inns and taverns played in America's early history. They gave protection, comfort and aid to the colonists, and they provided an important forum for many of our great men to acquire the wisdom, maturity and leadership they needed to defy England and win independence. It is for us to treasure and support the few that remain.

Located Graves of Soldiers and Patriots of the American Revolution—March 1, 1979-March 1, 1980

Locating graves of Revolutionary Soldiers was started by the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution in 1897-98. During the first year 32 graves were reported. This task is continued yearly through reports compiled by each State Historian and submitted to National Headquarters. Previous Lists were printed in the annual Smithsonian Report which has been discontinued. (Check Price List from Office of Corresponding Secretary General for availability.) A card file of these located graves is maintained in the Office of the Historian General; however, no further information is available on an individual soldier from this office. Between March 1, 1979 and March 1, 1980 NSDAR located 348 graves in 15 States. Data on those graves are provided in the following tabulation:

Chapter

Commemoration of the Battle of Yorktown

Books containing background material for Chapter use in planning programs on Yorktown

COMPiled by MOLLIE SOMERVILLE,

Historical Research Library

At its Regular Meeting, October 1980, the National Board of Management authorized the establishment of a Special Committee named the Yorktown Bicentennial Committee, Mrs. Robert Lacy Jackson, National Chairman, to commemorate the 200th Anniversary on October 19, 1981, of the Battle of Yorktown, the historic event that ended the American Revolutionary War.

All Chapters are being urged to plan programs around this battle: events leading up to it, the battle itself, and the aftermath. The books listed below deal with various specifics: military and naval history plus biographies and journals of the principals and/or participants. The wide range of themes available offer Chapters an unlimited selection of program material. Some Chapter names offer a ready-made theme, such as Rochambeau Chapter or Yorktown Chapter. Others may find a favorite son who was a participant, such Henry Laurens, or General Nathanael Greene. Chapters may prefer to select a special subject such as surgeons, chaplains, military music, or uniforms.

Among the books suggested here are works on these subjects in addition to histories and biographies of events and people connected with the Battle of Yorktown. The list is intended to serve only as a beginning point for sources from which to select program information. Be sure to check the bibliography of source material in each of the listed books for further suggestions. Undoubtedly, Chapter members and local librarians will have titles of their own to add.

Hugh Swinton Legaré, Forgotten Statesman

You Yankees liked him better than we did.

By Delores Bryan Britten

Old State House Chapter, Melrose, Massachusetts

The Rise of the American Nation, by Lewis Paul Todd and Merle Curti, calls Charleston, South Carolina the “home of statesmen.” It further states that, “By the 1850’s Charleston, in South Carolina, was the richest city in the world in wealth per capita, and certainly one of the most beautiful. But its fame rested on an even more substantial base. Few cities in America could boast a more distinguished line of citizens who through the years had served their state and nation in high office.

“There was, for example, Hugh Swinton Legaré (1797-1843) who had in the words of one historian, ‘The most cultivated mind in the South, and one of the most cultivated in America.’ Legaré was an impressive scholar. Versed in half-a-dozen languages, he was probably the most widely read man in the United States. His knowledge of law was encyclopedic. Yet in spite of his intense devotion to scholarly pursuits, he found time to serve as a diplomat, as Attorney General in President Tyler’s cabinet and as Acting Secretary of State.”

When Louis XIV rescinded the Edict of Nantes in 1685 many Huguenots fled to the island of Hispafiola (now containing the Republics of Haiti and Santo Domingo). Solomon Legaré, however, went to England and from there to South Carolina where he was one of the early citizens of the new city of Charleston. He did well in his calling as goldsmith, which enabled him to invest in land, and then to leave a rice plantation to each of his nine children when he died. The rice market with Spain was destroyed by the War of Jenkin’s Ear (1739-1748). For this reason his son Solomon turned to the raising of indigo. This was so profitable that Thomas, the emigree’s grandson, was able to loan a hundred thousand pounds to the Revolutionary cause. In buying power this is comparable to a million dollars today.

Solomon, Thomas’ youngest son, died before he was thirty, leaving his two daughters Eliza and Mary and his son Hugh to be raised by their mother Mary Swinton. She was the daughter of Hugh Swinton, a captain in the Revolutionary army. For that time he had some unusual ideas about educating women. His daughter Mary was a very erudite person indeed, and she guided her son’s education fully.

The Swintons were from the valley of the Tweed between England and Scotland, so young Hugh had “the singularly large proportions as from a thousand years of Border Barons with such titles as: ‘John of the Long Spear,’ ‘Archibald of the Axe,’ ‘Richard the Ready,’ or ‘Stout Sir Alan’ whose huge mace was seen wherever war was wildest.” But a childhood illness kept him from strenuous play so that all his energy went to study. (Mary Legaré-Bullen “Writings of Hugh Swinton Legaré.”)

“Yes, he was a great scholar and patriot, but you Yankees liked him better than we did. He fought Calhoun, you know, over secession. He hated Calhoun!” The speaker was Arthur Schrimmer a distant relative of mine whom we were visiting in Charleston. “This was his home,” the speaker continued, “but he did not own it. It belonged to his mother and later to his sister Mary. They supported him from their plantation on John’s Island. He never had a cent of his own.”

“I understand he was a very brilliant lawyer who never lost a case, but who seldom got paid because he always defended the underdog,” I commented.

“That’s right. He always served without pay when called upon.” Examples of this include patriotic orations for which he was famous, serving as Trustee of the South Carolina College, member of the Book Committee for the Charleston Library, member of the Charleston City Council, and for giving a series of free lectures organized by members of the Charleston Bar under the title of the Charleston Forensic Club.

In 1830 Senator Robert Y. Hayne of South Carolina in a debate with Daniel Webster gave a speech in which he declared that a state had a right to nullify a Federal law and to secede if it were deemed desirable. He also reminded New England that it had taken the same stand in the Hartford Convention of 1815. Webster replied with his famous speech that closed with the words, “Liberty and Union now and forever, one and inseparable.”

Legare agreed with Webster. The lawyer from South Carolina also thought the “American System” which Henry Clay was trying to force through Congress, was “unconstitutional, unjust, and inexpedient. The authors of this policy are indirectly responsible for this deplorable state of things, and for all the consequences that may grow out of it. They have been guilty of an inexplicable offence against their country. They found us a united, and they have made us a distracted people. They found the Union of these States an object of fervent love and religious veneration; they have made even its utility a subject of controversy among very enlightened men. They have brought us not peace but a sword.” He explained that nullification of a Federal law would be a revolutionary act and argued further that he did not believe either Jefferson or Madison would have favored nullification. The Nullifiers had to count the cost carefully if they were to take the step. “Let us weigh and consider before we advance to those measures which must bring on the most trying and terrible struggle this country ever saw.

“To this complexion it must come at last, and the only question now submitted to the people of South Carolina is, ‘Are you ready to absolve yourselves from your allegiance to the Government of the United States, and to take and maintain your station as a separate commonwealth among the nations of the earth?’” (Linda Rhea PhD., Hugh Swinton Legaré p. 88–89.)

Legaré thought that Calhoun had greatly exaggerated the grievances which South Carolina suffered. In the
by reading the President out of the Whig Party, an act that was never perpetrated before nor has it been since. True to their party affiliation all but two of Tyler's cabinet resigned. Daniel Webster, Secretary of State, remained to complete the Webster-Ashburton Treaty which ended the Aroostook War between the state of Maine and Canada. The other cabinet member who remained was the Attorney General, Hugh Swinton Legaré.

In June, 1843 President Tyler and his Attorney General, who by then was also Acting Secretary of State traveled to Boston to dedicate the Bunker Hill Monument. It was a cold raw day and the men from the south were lightly clad. Legaré contracted pneumonia and died at the Cambridge home of his friend Professor Tichnor of Harvard. Boston showed him the utmost honor and buried him in its most beautiful spot, Mt. Auburn Cemetery in Cambridge. His mother Mary Swinton Legaré and his sister Eliza Legaré Bryan had died a few weeks before. Therefore his sister Mary had the body transferred to Magnolia Cemetery in Charleston where she erected a large monument. She also spent the next two years editing and arranging his writings which she published in two volumes in 1845 with the forlorn hope of keeping the Union Party alive. Without its leader, the party disintegrated and the secessionists became more and more belligerent. Those who remained in the South for family reasons bore the bitter brunt of defeat and vengeance as much as those who had never been loyal to the Union.

The many references to Hugh Swinton Legaré in the Boston papers of 1843 had a strange aftermath. In the years following, Harriet Beecher Stowe wrote Uncle Tom's Cabin. Although she took care to protect herself by saying the characters were imaginary she used a name that all New Englanders would recognize as Southern. South Carolina has its own method of pronouncing the Huguenot names: Horry is Oree, Huger is Ugee, Legare is Legree. "Simon Legree," the name of the most vicious villain in Mrs. Stowe's book, could be easily recognized as Swinton Legaré with its Charlestonese pronunciation. This was a poor reward for a man who had devoted his life to his country and his fellow man.

PATRICK HENRY (Martinsville, VA) celebrated its 75th Anniversary June 15 with a tea at the home of Mrs. E. S. Tudor. Patriotic colors of red, white and blue were used in the decorations. The tea honored all past regents of the chapter, ten of whom are still living. Eight past regents, Mrs. C. A. Hall, Mrs. S. L. Goodman, Mrs. J. A. de-Shazo, Mrs. N. V. Colston, Mrs. Nick Prillaman, Jr., Mrs. N. R. Burroughs, Mrs. H. L. Daughtry and Mrs. C. K. Sparrow, attended the tea. Two past regents, Mrs. J. C. Kearfott and Mrs. A. J. Fischer, residents of the Martinsville Convalescent Home, were unable to attend. Mrs. Fischer was also regent of Montana in 1940. Guests were registered by Mrs. John T. McCauley, Jr. and Mrs. Roy Burgess. Mrs. Tudor welcomed the guests and introduced them to the honored past regents. Those attending the event were Mrs. G. Honts, State Vice Regent, from the Rainbow Ridge Chapter, Mrs. Frances Mallory Power of the Everglades Chapter, Miami, Fla. Mrs. William E. Crews of the James Hunter Chapter, Madison, N.C. and other members from the Major George Gibson Chapter, Rosehill, the Margaret Lynn Lewis Chapter, Roanoke, Dorothea Henry Chapter and Joseph Gravely Chapter, Danville, the William Pitt Chapter, Chatham, the Colonel Abram Penn Chapter, Stuart, the General Joseph Martin, Martinsville, and the Colonel George Waller Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution, Martinsville.

When the sixteen charter members met on June 15, 1905 to organize a chapter with Mrs. Mary Cabell Smith as organizing regent, they chose the name Patrick Henry to perpetuate the memory of a pioneer statesman, a man of military and executive ability, and a man destined to become one of the leaders to shape the destiny of America. The name selected also had other special significance, as it represented two adjoining counties, Patrick and Henry, rich in history and scenic beauty. As Patrick Henry was a raconteur, he had several homes, one in the Leatherwood section, near Martinsville, where he lived from 1779 to 1784. Since 1905 21 regents have given leadership to the chapter activities. One member, Mrs. W. M. Whittle, has held membership 57 years. Several present members have had membership over 40 years. The chapter has a record for patriotic service and a ready response to the requirements as set forth by NSDAR. One member, Mary Creath Colston, is a direct descendant of Patrick Henry. The chapter history will be compiled during the year which will give the highlights of each regent’s term.—Bess Prillaman Tudor.

CARTERET (Morehead City, NC) sponsored Flag Day festivities on the Morehead City waterfront June 14. A triangle of land owned by Cap’n Otis, next to his fleet of charter fishing boats, was the scene. The old fishing boat landmark there was decorated with American Flags and streamers, with Flags outlining the triangle. Color guards from Boy Scout Troop 130 of Morehead City and Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2401 and its Auxiliary of Beaufort held their assembled banners aloft during the ceremonies and concert.

The band from US. Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, gave a one-hour concert, highlighted during two numbers by the drum virtuosity of a member. The band included one female member, her husband and brother.

Mrs. Howard F. Mooney, Flag of the United States of America Chairman, planned the event. Under the leadership of Bob Guthrie, Scoutmaster, the boys tied yellow ribbons around poles along the waterfront as a reminder of the American hostages in Iran.

Mrs. C. P. Stapleton was installed as Regent of Carteret Chapter at the annual luncheon meeting.

DAR 25-year membership certificates were presented to six members at this meeting. They are Mrs. Eugene H. Brooks, Mrs. William R. Earnest, Mrs. Robert H. Long, Mrs. H. L. Phillips, Mrs. V. F. Phillips and Mrs. Hector P. Saravia.

A color slide program reviewing events in the three-year history of the chapter honored outgoing Organizing Regent, Mrs. Roger W. Hines.

Fourth of July 1980 Carteret Chapter assumed co-sponsorship of Col. William Cray Society, Children of the American Revolution. Joseph Montfort DAR Chapter of Jacksonville, in adjoining Onslow County, will continue its assistance with the young people. Mrs. Hines, whose son Jason is N.C. State C.A.R. Chairman for National Heritage, will be Senior President for the youth group.

Carteret Chapter was privileged to provide a dozen hostesses at the home of Beaufort Historical Society President, Mrs. David Cloud, June 27-28. The occasion was the annual two-day Homes Tour of Olde Beaufort. DAR members attired in floor-length appropriate costumes welcomed guests to the circa 1730 Owins-Bedford House.

This particular house was a “must” on the 1980 tour. “Love, Goodwill and Affection,” an original play written by Carteret chapter member Mrs. Cope- land Kell, was a popular feature of the three-day activities. Based upon the romantic triangle involved in first ownership of the house, the play was set to music by Laurence Stith, local composer.
OWAHGENA (Cazenovia, NY). At a special meeting of the Chapter Mrs. Geraldine Streiff of Fabius was presented an award for being the DAR Chapter member with the greatest number of direct living descendants as active members in the National Society, DAR.

Mrs. Streiff won out in a “Mystery Woman” contest conducted through the DAR’s magazine publication. One of over 3,000 chapters in the U.S., the Cazenovia Chapter submitted Mrs. Streiff’s name and qualifications. Her ten active family relatives (seven daughters and three grand-daughters) brought her and the Owahgena Chapter the National recognition.

Mrs. Walter F. Mann, Owahgena Regent, presented the award and then went on to say that the Chapter had also been honored for having Mrs. Streiff as a member, with a monetary award and certificate from Washington. Corsages were presented to Mrs. Streiff and each of the daughters and grand-daughters by Miss Eloise Hudson, Vice Regent, and other members of the Chapter.

Mrs. Streiff’s daughters are: Mrs. Frieda Evans, Mrs. Naomi Stroup, Mrs. Bonita Breed, Mrs. Claire Von Hassel, Mrs. Marion Murphy, Mrs. Janice Doroshenko, and Mrs. Teresa Herlihy. Grand-daughters are: Mrs. Rhonda Kopley, Miss Elaine Evans, and Mrs. Phyllis Brame.

HESTER SCHUYLER COLFAX (Wayne, NJ). Elizabeth Van Dyne Smith of Ringwood, N.J. was the center of attention during a recent party in her honor at the old Van Duyne house on the Wayne Museum property. She had donated a very rare antique desk, vintage 1700s, to the Wayne Historical Commission.

The desk was given in the name of Margaret Day (her daughter) and the Hester Schuyler Colfax Chapter. Mrs. Day is the immediate past Regent and Mrs. Smith is the Historian of the Hester Schuyler Colfax Chapter.

Accepting the gift were Gertrude Luks, Chairman of the Wayne Historical Commission, and Gretchen Tiedeman, current Regent of the Hester Schuyler Colfax Chapter, and a member of the historical commission.

Although the spelling of her maiden name differs from the Van Duyne house, Mrs. Smith nevertheless is a direct descendant of one of the Van Duyne brothers who came over to this country and arrived in New Amsterdam in 1640.

An ardent collector of antiques because of her love of history, Mrs. Smith was a New Jersey Assemblywoman for three terms. She also is well known in Passaic County as a former superintendent of elections in Paterson for many years before she retired.

The Van Duyne House is now located on the Wayne Museum property. The cornerstone is dated 1706 making it the second oldest house in Wayne.

TA BEAU (Higginsville, Mo.) enjoyed an outstanding Flag Day program at their June meeting. “My Legacy to You” was presented by Mrs. Elizabeth Haney, member, explaining that her legacy to members and to her country is to help students in her fifth grade classes discover for themselves how our nation came into being, the meaning of our flag, and patriotism. She uses an original simulation project which begins with students dividing into colonies. Problems are introduced and the colonists must solve them without any guidance since Mrs. Haney is “invisible.” Eventually the idea of a Continental Congress is introduced and representatives are chosen to settle disputes through compromise.

No flag is displayed except individual flags of each colony. During the Revolution a thirteen star flag, made by former students, is hung in the room. Final activity is to write a paper on what the flag means. Several students read their essays at the meeting. Tony Murry explained the simulation and asked Chapter members to salute the thirteen star flag. Students led in singing the national anthem. Jason Hopkins wondered what Betsy Ross thought as she made the flag. Linda Carlyle shared the importance of seeing a flag leading a battle charge. Lee Jones researched a paper on how Flag Day came about. Kevin Tilly told how stars were added to Old Glory. Amy Burge learned that our flag was the first to be chosen by the people rather than a ruler. Russell Brauer thought it important to be strong defensively. Michael Dalhor is glad there are so many versions of how our flag came into being. Each child added what seeing our flag means to him personally.

Ta Beau Chapter was organized in 1976 and has seventy-one members.

BISTINEAU (Ringgold, Louisiana). February 27, 1955 Bistineau Chapter was organized under the direction of Mrs. Raphael Bloch, who also served as first Regent. Twenty-five years of dedication and service was observed February, 1980 with a Silver Anniversary Tea, honoring Charter members, culminating a year’s activities dedicated to present and past Chapter Regents.

Among Bistineau’s accomplishments during those years, the Chapter recalled sponsoring a State first place DAR Good Citizens, American History Teacher winner and attaining 100% Magazine subscriptions. Two genealogical books have been presented to the NSDAR Library: “An Irish Stowaway,” a history of the Cullen Thomas Conly family and “The Wimberly Family History,” tracing the Wimberly ancestry to 14th Century lineage. Bistineau actively supports Constitution Week and American History Month with exhibits, programs, essays, proclamations and public service announcements.

Lake Bistineau, an important lifeline for early settlers and plantation owners of the area, gave the Chapter its name. Because of the “Great Raft” in Red River, Lake Bistineau was used early in the nineteenth century as a detour for steamboats traveling north from New Orleans. Mists of obscurity and speculation shroud the name “Bistineau.” As early as 1816 the modern spelling appeared on maps. Later spellings included “Bestino” or “Big Froth Lake,” an Indian name referring to the vast quantities of froth floating on its surface, and “Bistinano.” Speculation has early French settlers in this region responsible for present day French “Bistineau.”

Pictured is Mrs. Ralph Wilson, Regent, presenting 25 year certificates to Charter members: Mrs. E. M. Walker, Miss Mary A. Wimberly, Mrs. V. W. Fletcher, Mrs. E. S. Woodward and Miss Jessie Nell Wimberly.

SAN ANTONIO de BEXAR (San Antonio, TX). One would have to search far and wide to find a more expressive example of living by the principles of “God, Home and Country” than we find in Miss Mary E. Vela.

In her classroom, as in her life, love of Country is not a separate subject—it is another thread to be woven into the tapestry of life. Her classroom is democracy in action; her Junior American Citizenship Club was formed to demonstrate its principles in action and has remained the Abraham Lincoln Junior American Citizens Club since its inception in 1960.

A deep love of our country’s heritage was the springboard for Miss Vela to adopt the Junior American Citizens Club into her first grade when it was introduced to her at Davy Crockett Elementary School during her first year there. Miss Vela explained to the children the details of a JAC Club. Their club should have a name and it could be the name of a person living or deceased. Being a presidential election year, the children suggested the names of several presidents. Abraham Lincoln was selected.

On November 8, 1960, Election Day, students learned the democratic process of electing officers by secret ballot. From their class, they chose a President, Vice-President, Secretary Sergeant-at-arms, Artist, Reporter and, more recently, Assistant Reporter.

The new flags presented by the Oglethorpe Chapter members Mrs. J. W. Woodruff and Miss Emily Woodruff.

GRANBY (Lexington, S.C.) dedicated a DAR marker at the grave of Bertha Efird Caughman, charter member killed in an auto accident November 1979. Relatives and friends joined the Daughters for the ceremony in Pilgrim Lutheran cemetery. The DAR ritual was conducted by Regent Anne Kaminer and Chaplain Ganelle Harmon, assisted by Historian Mary Austin. The tribute and benediction were given by Rev. Elford Roof, Mrs. Caughman’s pastor. Amy Austin, Mrs. Austin’s granddaughter, played two trumpet solos.

OGLETORPE (Columbus, Georgia). One of the highlights of the year for the chapter was the presentation of three new flags (United States, Georgia and Oglethorpe) given to the chapter by Mrs. J. W. Woodruff, Sr., oldest member and her daughter, Miss Emily Woodruff, in memory of Ethel Woodruff Draper. A fire had destroyed the previous flags.

Since June 14th is Flag Day, this dedication on June 5th was very appropriate. Coffee honoring new members and guests was enjoyed before the meeting.

Mrs. George Murphy, Regent, proudly presided and welcomed the new members and guests. Mrs. Sam Adams, Flag Chairman, and Mrs. Paul Belk, Program Chairman, planned the program. The beautiful flags were brought in by the color bearers; Mrs. Jack Straus, Historian, Mrs. Russell Patch, Corresponding Secretary, and Miss Fran Hall, State Second Vice President and Treasurer Southeastern Region, N.S.C.A.R. Miss Ruth Schuessler played the piano for the procession.

After the flags were posted, Mrs. Prentiss Neal, Vice Regent, accepted them. A prayer was given by Mrs. Sam Adams, Past Regent, and Mrs. Richard
The Pledge To The Flag Of The United States Of America was led by Mrs. A. J. Land, Past Regent; the singing of the Star Spangled Banner was led by Mrs. Robert Loflin, Past Regent; the Pledge To The Georgia Flag led by Mrs. Perry Gordy; and the American's Creed led by Mrs. Charles Q. Hall, Senior National Vice President of the Southeastern Region, N.S.C.A.R.

Mrs. Robert Loflin gave a reading of the Flag by Edith Scott Magna and Mrs. Robert O'Neal led the DAR Creed.

The Oglethorpe Chapter was happy and grateful to receive the beautiful flags. The new yearbooks for 1980-1981 have been dedicated to Mrs. Woodruff. She is indeed a dedicated daughter.

SAVANNAH (Georgia). Members of three chapters, Savannah, Lachlan McIntosh and Bonaventure, gathered at the monument of Button Gwinnett in Colonial Cemetery for a Memorial Service and a Salute to the Nation, Friday morning, July 4th. Gwinnett was one of three Georgians who signed the Declaration of Independence in Philadelphia, July 4, 1776. After reading excerpts from the Historical Document, Miss Leila Sandlin, Savannah Chapter Regent, placed a copy of the original Declaration of Independence on the grave followed with "Taps" by Boy Scout Johnny Odum, Troop 115, Thunderbolt, Georgia.

TOPEKA (Kansas). The Kansas Daughters of the American Revolution represented by the members of Jane Dean Coffey and Uvedale Chapters, dedicated on May 29, 1980, a new headstone and Bronze DAR marker for a Daughter of a Revolutionary Patriot in Hamilton Co., Indiana. Mrs. Francis L. Johnson, Honorary State Regent of Kansas and a past Vice President General, conducted the Dedication. She was assisted by Rev. Clyde Thralls, pastor of Hinkle Creek Friends Church and descendants Mrs. George A. London and her daughter Mrs. Pauline Christy of Carthage, St. Louis, Missouri, a Kansas SAR member. Mrs. George A. He left New Jersey right after the War, emigrating first to Virginia and later to Highland Co., Ohio, where his daughter Esther was born. She married Jonathan Haworth on 1 Feb. 1827, as his second wife. They came to Hamilton Co., Indiana in 1835, when it was still a wilderness. They established a home and endured all the hardships and privations of pioneer life.

Jonathan Haworth died 21 Feb. 1867, and Esther Haworth died 12 Feb. 1874. They were both buried in the Cemetery adjoining Hinkle Creek Friends Church in Hamilton Co. of which they were members. Three sons survived them and their descendants have spread from Indiana to Kansas and on to Oregon and many other states.

The new headstone was furnished by Mrs. George A. London and her daughter, Mrs. Thomas M. Spencer III, of Topeka, Kansas. The Bronze marker was furnished through the generosity and love of descendants Mrs. George London, Coffeyville, Kansas; Miss Clova Haworth, Westfield, Indiana; Mrs. Lowell Evans of rural Sheridan, Indiana. Mrs. Frank Wilcox, Delphi, Ind. furnished the red, white and blue flowers. Many friends were also present including Mrs. Pauline Christy of Carmel, Ind., Mrs. R. W. SHADRACK ROGERS (Collins, Mississippi) was organized in August 16, 1946 with 23 charter members whose ancestor was Shadrack Rogers. One of the highlights for 1979–1980 was the program on the history of the chapter compiled and presented by Mrs. Percy Smith. The charter members were also honored at this meeting with a tea. Mrs. Winston Speed showed movies of the early days of the chapter serving as hostesses at Rosalie, the Mississippi DAR Shrine which is an Antebellum home of the South. Those who were honored are Charter members and still living were: Mrs. Clifton Keys, Sr., who is now the Regent, Mrs. Winston Speed, Mrs. Willis Rutland, Mrs. William Todd, Mrs. Frazier Vaughn.

December 1979 was another very interesting program on Christmas Symbols presented by Mrs. Irving Hitt. Mrs. Clifton Keys Sr. also gave a program on an outstanding Church woman Lottie Moon, one of the first Baptist Missionaries to China. This program was very inspiring and timely for the Lottie Moon Christmas offering was placed at his grave site by his descendant who is now the Regent, Mrs. William Kern, Librarian.

Following a desert luncheon served by the hostess, Mrs. Garnet Holmes, all of the members and guests went to the park. A wreath and American flags were placed on Anna Howard Shaw’s memorial by Mrs. Marion White, Flag Chairman.

London

NATCHEZ (Natchez, Mississippi) under the leadership of Regent, Mrs. James A. (Louise) Biggs, has completed two projects of significance this year. Grave markers honoring seventeen deceased members were placed in the Natchez City Cemetery during a dedication on January 27, 1980 with many relatives and friends attending. Two markers were delivered to Jackson and Magnolia and have been placed there by relatives.

The second project was a special 84th anniversary meeting on May 5, 1980 to dedicate a plaque in memory of the first meeting of the Natchez Chapter, the first Chapter organized in Mississippi and among the earlier Chapters in the Nation. The meeting was held at "Monmouth," the antebellum mansion of General John A. Quitman of the War with Mexico fame, which is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Riches and Mr. and Mrs. Mason Gordan.

On May 5, 1896 twelve ladies met at "Monmouth" with Miss Alice Quitman Lovell, a direct descendant of General Quitman, serving as Organizing Regent to form the Natchez Chapter. Since that organizational meeting the Natchez Chapter has had thirty Regents, some of whom attended the anniversary meeting. In honor of those Regents, gifts were made to Tamasee School, Kate Duncan Smith School, and Baylies Home Economics Department of the Kate Duncan Smith School.

Mrs. William S. Murphy, State Regent and a direct descendant of one of the organizers of the Natchez Chapter, Mrs. Katherine Boyd Surget, was a special guest at the dedication. The newly elected officers were installed by Mrs. Murphy who used much the same ritual as the one used at the recently held national installation ceremony in Washington.

SANTA ANITA (Arcadia, CA). Isabel Escudero was accepted as a member of the Santa Anita Chapter, DAR on December 3, 1976, by virtue of her direct lineage with her Revolutionary ancestor, Thomas Ringgold, who fought during the American Revolution and acted in various capacities as: 1) Patriot and Member of the Committee of Correspondence serving in the Eastern Neck of Maryland; 2) Member of the Maryland Convention—Annapolis, May 8th, 1776; and 3) Signer of the Association of Freemens Declaration.

Thomas Ringgold was born in Chestertown, Maryland on December 4, 1744 and died October 26, 1776, apparently from measles. Tradition has it that he had not fallen ill and died, he would have been one of the signatories to the Declaration of Independence.

The Ringgolds were a politically active and quite influential family from 1650 through 1860, that is to say, during 200 years, contributing from their Maryland territory to build America a free world. Thomas was the 5th generation of Ringgolds in America, the first having been a Royalist who fled England during Oliver Cromwell's dictatorship and the 1648 Civil Wars. When he came to America he was a widower with two sons. He purchased initially 1,000 acres of land in the Eastern Neck of Maryland.

Thomas' father was a wealthy merchant of Chestertown who represented Maryland as Delegate to the Continental Convention of 1765. Thomas' son, Tench, was a Congressman, very active in politics and close to President James Monroe. Another son, Samuel, was also a Congressman from Maryland who married at the White House, Marie Antoinette Hay, daughter of George Hay (Prosecutor of Aaron Burr). Hay's second wife was James Monroe's daughter. Samuel had several children: Samuel, a Major in the U.S. Army, was mortally wounded in Palo Alto while fighting against Mexico; he was the inventor of the U.S. Army McClellan saddle; Cadwallader was a Rear Admiral; George, a U.S. Army General, died during the Civil War. He was extremely instrumental in preventing California's seceding from the Union; and Fayette Monroe Ringgold who was appointed U.S. Consul to Peru (1849-1861) where he married and left descendants. Isabel Escudero, currently Vice Regent of Santa Anita Chapter, is the 5th generation of Ringgold descendants in Peru (she was born in Peru; now resides in California). Isabel's mother, Isabel Y. de Canepa, and her 91-year-old grandfather, Carmela R. de Yori, also members of Santa Anita Chapter, are still living in Lima, Peru.

HARMONY MISSION (Rich Hill, MO). Mrs. E. Joyce Christiansen, Regent, and Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Keirsey, cousins, left for Mountain City, Tennessee to help in dedication of a Historical Marker honoring their forefathers Adam Weitzel and Lewis Wills, Sr.

Dedication Services were held in the Wills Cemetery, north of Mountain City on July 2. The Cemetery lies atop a hill—a part of the original farm bought by Lewis Wills, Sr. when he came to Tennessee in 1790. About sixty people had gathered for the occasion: twenty-seven of whom were direct descendants of Lewis or Adam or both. Adam had two daughters who married sons of Lewis—so some were double cousins, descending from both.

The Program was given almost entirely by descendants, with Mrs. Christiansen giving the Dedication Address and Rev. Keirsey giving the Benediction. The lives of Adam and Lewis were reviewed. Their growing up and marriage in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania; their service during the Revolution; the seventeen years time it took them to move from Pennsylvania to Tennessee; their place in the development of the Country in which they lived and which they loved. They built schools and churches, farmed, and developed iron forges and helped with many things to make America bigger and better for their families and all who would come after them. They were men of high ideals. This characteristic has been passed on to their descendant.

On their way home, Mrs. Christiansen and the Keirsey's came through Kentucky to see the area where their Christie grandparents had lived. They found the Christie School, the Christie Church, and the cemetery where many of them are buried. They also found and visited with distant cousins still living in the area.

ABIGAIL BARTHOLOMEW (Daytona Beach, FL). In honor of Independence Day, 1980, the chapter issued a salute to some of the community's young people of whom we are justly proud. High on the list, Miss Amy Manke is named for multiple graduation honors. These include an award for creative writing, Junior ROTC service ribbon, Junior Academic ribbon, Mainland letter for Scholastic Team, the Air Force Junior ROTC award from the Abigail Bartholomew Chapter. A scholarship was awarded to Marie McCormack. Further honors were awarded to Michele Molnar, Lori Van Rhee, Debra Better in the form of Good Citizen Awards.

The presentation of a Certificate of Award was accorded to John B. Albaugh at the Chapter's seventy-second birthday luncheon by Mrs. John Marshall Buckner, a former Chapter Regent, who currently holds the high honor of Florida State Regent. Notably, John Slaughter had received the rank of Eagle Scout at the age of fourteen. He worked the entire year of 1979 on his Eagle Scout project, a Scouting Historical Museum at the Casement Cultural and Civic Center now located in the former home of John D. Rockefeller. John's father is a charter member of the Ormond Daytona S.A.R., and his aunt, Doris Ann Slaughter, is a member of the Abigail Bartholomew Chapter.

Last, but not least, we congratulate William (Billy) John Johns III, President of the Children of the American Revolution, Jonathan Wright Society.

The Chapter's Independence Day Celebration occurred in front of the Abigail Bartholomew Chapter plaque in the River Front Park of Daytona Beach. The plaque was placed in celebration of the United States Bicentennial in 1976 during the Regency of Mrs. Charles Nordquist. It specifies the proven names of Revolutionary soldiers who elected to live in Florida after the Revolutionary War. —Grace Deans

CANAAN (Daytona, CT). Members and guests of the chapter gathered at Mountain View Cemetery in Canaan, Ct. to dedicate the marker on the grave of Revolutionary War Officer, Mariner Rood, Jr. The event followed four years of preparation by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph J. Fisher of Glendora, Calif., who flew to the East Coast for the ceremony. Mrs. Fisher, a member of Serrano Chapter, is a descendant. Mrs. Victor S. Clarke, Salisbury Chapter Regent, led the ceremony assisted by Chaplain, Mrs. Harry F. Jopp. The invocation and benediction were given by the Rev. Peter Dakers, Pastor of the North Congregational Church. The early Roods, including Mariner Jr. had attended this Church.

Members of VFW Couch-Pipa and Garvin O'Connor American Legion Posts were color bearers and guards. Mrs. Fisher gave a brief history of her ancestor. She noted his mother's maiden name was Mary Cornish. He married Mary Keeney who gave him nine children between 1765 and 1792. Rood's military service in the early part of the war was primarily committee work to fill the ranks of the Continental Army. In May 1781 he was commissioned as ensign of the First Company, 14th Regiment comprised of men from Cornwall, Sharon, Salisbury, Canaan and Norfolk. He was made Lieutenant of that Company in 1783 and later promoted to the rank of Captain.

Following the ceremony guests visited the old Lawrence Tavern built in 1751 and drove to see the remains of Samuel Forbes furnace, slitting mill and anchor works on Lower Road. Here was forged a portion of the great chain which stretched across the Hudson River during the Revolutionary War. The tour concluded with refreshments at the North Canaan Congregational Church in East Canaan.

COLUMBIA (Washington, D.C.) and SARATOGA (Saratoga Springs, N.Y.). In a ceremony at the Stillwater Union Cemetery, Stillwater, New York, Columbia and Saratoga Chapters dedicated an NSDAR Real Daughter marker at the grave of Catharine M. Esselstyn Coon (Mrs. John P. Coon). Her father, Jacob Esselstyn, was a Private in the 8th Regiment of the Albany County Militia. Not only was Mrs. Coon a Real Daughter, but her grandfather, Richard Esselstyn, served in the Revolution and is listed as a Second Major in the New York Regiment of Col. Robert Vannessler, and her great grandfather, also named Jacob, is listed in the New York Pension Records for his service and was a Class #15 entitled to Land Bounty Rights. Mrs. Coon joined Columbia Chapter in 1901 and remained a member until her death in 1906.

Mrs. William G. Keehan, Saratoga Regent, who made all the arrangements for and conducted the service, introduced Mrs. William G. Dreisbach, Columbia Vice Regent, and Mr. Marvin Kipp, chairman of the board of trustees of the Village of Stillwater, as well as the participants in the service. Tim Lowry, Vice President of Bemis Heights Society, C.A.R., represented that group.

Presentation of Colors was by Marvin Kipp, Jr. and Tim Robichaud, members of Troop 35, Boy Scouts of Stillwater. The assembly recited the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag of the U.S. and The American's Creed. Miss Marjorie Theobald, New York State Regent, gave the invocation and a moving Message from the President General was read by Mrs. Paul M. Niebell, Sr., D.C. State Regent. Greetings from Mrs. Ralph E. Theobald, New York State Regent, were read by Mrs. Frank Wood of Saratoga Chapter. Mrs. Niebell brought greetings from the District Daughters.

Mrs. Elizabeth F. Abel, Stillwater Town Historian, gave a biographical sketch of Mrs. Coon. Dedication of the marker was shared by Mrs. Morrison R. McCormick, Columbia Chapter Regent, and Mrs. Ira Aldorf, Saratoga
Chapter Chaplain. Mrs. George F. Putney, past Regent of Columbia Chapter, placed a floral wreath at the grave and the ceremony was concluded with Father Joseph E. Anselment, St. Peter's Church, Stillwater, giving the benediction.

Mr. Van R. Campbell, Cemetery Superintendent, conducted a tour of the beautiful cemetery (ablate with flowers and U.S. flags) where many Revolutionary Soldiers are buried. One of the historic graves visited was that of Mrs. Frances Tupper Nash, New York State Regent 1920-1926.

Saratoga Chapter members Barbara Holbrook, Shirley Brown and Jill Curtis served refreshments at the Bemis Heights Grange, much to the delight of the visiting D.C. delegation. The day's activities concluded with a tour of the Saratoga National Historical Park.

MENDOCINO (Mendocin, CA) dedicated a marker on the grave of Mrs. Maurine Lewis Ashton in the Mendocino Cemetery.

Mrs. Ashton was a charter member of Plihockathokee Chapter of New Port Richey, Florida, which was co-sponsor of the dedication.

Mrs. Ashton was a sixth generation descendent of James Williamson, who served as an ensign in the navy, and whose place of residence during the Revolutionary War was Virginia.

Among her various offices in DAR, Mrs. Ashton served as secretary of the Mahoning County Chapter in Youngstown, Ohio. She was also chairman of the Junior American Citizens Program for five years and chairman of the Kate Duncan Smith DAR School programs. She was an honorary delegate to the 1976 Continental Congress.

The dedication ceremony was conducted before a backdrop of a large hand-knitted replica of the American flag made and donated to the Mendocino Chapter by Mrs. Ed Ferris. Mrs. Henry Williams, Regent of Mendocino Chapter, welcomed the members and guests who attended the ceremony, and Mrs. Ernest Baker, Chaplain of Mendocino Chapter, gave the invocation.

Mrs. Ashton's daughter Judith Frank read a very touching biography in tribute to her mother, closing with a quotation from her journal: "My life has been full and interesting, and I am waiting for the next great adventure and the secret of eternal life."

Mrs. Williams then gave the dedication, followed by a prayer by Mrs. Baker. Mrs. Korsiaek read the marker inscription and spoke of the significance of the dedication. The American's Creed was read in unison by all present, and Mrs. E.E. Dow, Treasurer of Mendocino Chapter, placed a beautiful wreath on the grave. The ceremony was closed by a benediction given by Mrs. Baker.

All present then adjourned for a luncheon at the Garden Room of the Mendocino Hotel.

SWATARA PINE FORD (Middletown, PA) completed a year of activities with a covered dish picnic. Officers who will serve for the next three years were installed and plans were made for the coming year. The Chapter's Supplement to the Year Book, 1979-1980, received both State and National Recognition—Blue Ribbon and Red, White and Blue Ribbon with a Gold Star. The Chapter had representatives at both the Southcentral District's Constitution Day and Junior Luncheons and State and National Conventions. The Chapter paid for the restoration of the monument containing names of all Middletown Revolutionary Soldiers. The monument is located on the grounds of historic St. Peter's Kierch, built in 1767. An American Flag was presented to the Middletown Historical Society on 28 April 1980. The flag will be the first flag to fly on the grounds of the recently restored historic Ferry House, a Middletown landmark. The DAR Good Citizen Award and two DAR History Awards were presented to Class of 1980 members of the Middletown Area High School. The DAR Good Citizenship Medal was presented to an 8th Grade Student at the George W. Feuser Junior High School. A poem entitled "Independence," written and illustrated by co-workers of a chapter member, was framed and presented to the Middletown Public Library. Monetary donations were sent to both Kate Duncan Smith and Tamassee DAR Schools. Prior to Memorial Day, Chapter members placed American Flags on graves of Revolutionary Soldiers and deceased Chapter members. Chapter members celebrated the Chapter's 60th birthday at a lovely dinner held in the Social Hall of the Wesley United Methodist Church, Middletown. Husbands and friends, including the DAR Good Citizen and his father, were guests of Chapter members at this affair.

Interesting meetings have been planned for the coming year. During this time, the Chapter plans to have another monument restored. The monument was originally placed in 1925, by the chapter, just off Route 230, on the banks of the Swatara Creek. This marks the location of Pine Ford, the ancestral home of George Fisher, the Founder of Middletown. Unfortunately, the original home was destroyed by fire many years ago. The foundation of the monument has been badly eroded by weather and especially the flood in June 1972, caused by Hurricane Agnes.

Special emphasis will be placed this year on the recruiting of new members for Swatara Pine Ford Chapter.

FINCASTLE (Louisville, Kentucky) presented to Jefferson County, Kentucky on its 200th Birthday, the restored first court order book of the county. This book is of great importance to genealogists and historians. The book was deteriorating badly and was sent to the Borrow Laboratories in Virginia to be deacidified, encapsulated and then rebound in the style of the period. The restoration was financed by auctions held among the members after two chapter meetings. A great deal of publicity was generated for Fincastle Chapter by this action.

NOVEMBER 1980
Pioneers who reached the mighty Mississippi could not have envisioned such a project as the new Alton dam and locks. Yet it was the faith of these forefathers in themselves, in freedom, in this country, and in God that kept them pressing farther and farther into the wilderness. Their courage and perseverance in the face of staggering odds laid the groundwork for the later scientific and engineering accomplishments of their progeny.

It was truly “Faith of our Fathers” that lead to the establishing of Southern Illinois Normal University in 1874. It opened for a summer institute with an enrollment of 53 students. It achieved university status in 1947 as Southern Illinois University.

MRS. DONALD WORLEY, Illinois State Registrar and Chairman of the State Membership Commission, devised a plan to promote membership in the state, and it won first place among membership projects at Continental Congress.

The position of each chapter was designated by a green leaf on a large map of the state. For each new member added to the chapter a violet was added to the leaf marking the location, and results were on display at State Conference. The violet is the state flower of Illinois.

Each DAR responsible for assisting and encouraging a prospective member to apply received a violet pin when the application was accepted. A purple ribbon was added if the applicant was a junior because juniors are special.

GREETINGS FROM GRANT WOOD COUNTRY

HOME of humorist, satirist GRANT WOOD, who “jarred America awake to the glories of American landscapes, life and people.”

LOCATION of more of his art work than anywhere else in the world.
LAND of “real character” providing the artist “decorating experiences” that still speak to people.

COME SEE

His birthplace; the restored one-room ANTI OCH country school he attended near ANAMOSA; burial place, STONE CITY, where his art colony flourished for two summers; THE STUDIO No. 5 Turner Alley, on the Register of National Historic Sites; GRANT WOOD ART GALLERY at the CEDAR RAPIDS Art Center; VETERANS MEMORIAL COLISEUM WINDOW, the Chamber of Commerce, Iowa Masonic Library, Coe College, University of Iowa Museum of Art, Carnegie-Stout Public Library, DUBUQUE, the Charles H. MacNider Museum, MASON CITY, CHARLES CITY Public Library, and the WATERLOO Municipal Art Galleries, to VIEW his work. ATTEND the annual GRANT WOOD ART FESTIVAL in June at STONE CITY.

VISIT US FOR AN IN DEPTH GLIMPSE OF GRANT WOOD

THE MIDNIGHT RIDE OF PAUL REVERE

GRANT WOOD stands by his masterpiece, painted in STUDIO No. 5, Turner Alley. He took time-exposed pictures of himself and his paintings, before their final completion, using a BOX camera. PAUL and HORSE are missing. The artist had difficulty finding a horse model that suited him, UNTIL he discovered a child’s ROCKING HORSE in the home of a friend, and borrowed it. Picture was painted in 1931.

MRS. EDWARD R. ROUSTIO, DIRECTOR
The birthplace of Mamie Doud Eisenhower, located at 709 Carroll Street in Boone, Iowa, was dedicated on Sunday, June 22, 1980. This dedication makes the home a historical landmark.

Bob Hope, Governor Robert D. Ray, Representative Tom Harkin, Mrs. John Eisenhower, Mamie’s sister, Mrs. Gordon Moore and her son Michael Gill, were among the approximately 5,000 people attending the dedication.

The restoration has recaptured the style of the 1890’s when it was Mamie’s home. Many of the furnishings and mementos are from the maternal Carlson family home where her Uncle, Joel Carlson lived all his life. Mrs. Eisenhower’s sister; the Eisenhower Museum at Abilene, Kansas; the Colorado Historical Society Museum in Denver, and other relatives and friends have donated and loaned items to help make the furnishings attractive and authentic. In the museum on the lower level of the house are cases with pictures and mementos of the Doud, Carlson, and Eisenhower families.

The large marker, designating the site as the birthplace of Mamie Doud Eisenhower, was placed on the property by the DeShon Chapter DAR on November 2, 1954, the same year in which the Eisenhowers moved into the White House.

Todd House at Tabor, originally the home of Rev. John Todd, served as a station on the "Underground Railroad" during the troublous years just prior to the Civil War. "Father" Todd, active in the militant effort to bring Kansas into the Union as a free state, also used his home and barn to store military material. At one time there were several hundred Sharps rifles, quantities of ammunition and even two brass cannon's stored there.

HONORARY STATE REGENT
MRS. ERMAL L. McMICHAEL
Southwest Iowa's only State Regent
Shenandoah, Iowa

Goldenrod rural school, Clarinda, which dates back to before 1875, is considered the birthplace of the 4-H boys and girls clubs movement in Iowa. There its teacher, Jessie Field Shambaugh, interested some of her pupils to join together in a practical work-study program suited to farm children, which soon became a part of the national 4-H movement. The school is in the National Historic Buildings record at this time.

Chief Waubonsie, the leader of the Pottawattami tribe of Indians whose lands took up much of southwest Iowa from 1837 until they were moved to Kansas in 1846, had his village on the border between Fremont and Mills county and upon his death in 1847, he was buried near there. He gave his name to the Waubonsie State Park and the loess bluffs along the Missouri river in southwest Iowa, known as "Waubonsie Hills." Shenandoah DAR marked this grave in 1972.

(right) Pioneer Log Cabin at Malvern, was originally constructed by the pioneer Jacob and Valeria Wortman on their farm in Deer Creek township in 1856 and has the original walnut logs used then. It was marked by Glenwood Chapter DAR, in 1980.

Buena Vista College was founded in 1891 by the local Storm Lake Presbyterian Church and the Presbytery of Northwest Iowa, initiating an intimate bond between the college and the Presbyterian Church. The college, proudly continuing its affiliation with the United Presbyterian Church in the USA, is located in Buena Vista County, in the community of Storm Lake, Iowa. It derived its name from its home county which was named after the Battle of Buena Vista in the Mexican American War.

Enjoying a long tradition of service to Iowa and the midwest, Buena Vista College offers a combined program of liberal arts education and career preparation, which has historically featured business and teacher education.

Over the last six academic years, Buena Vista, with a modest endowment, has enhanced its reputation as a top teaching institution with modern facilities. Its reputation in pre-medicine, business, education and the humanities has been a contributing factor in the college’s 60 percent increase in enrollment since 1974 with entering students having a grade point average of “B” or better. As a result the college has turned into one of Iowa’s fastest growing educational institutions.

On May 17, 1980, the college celebrated a momentous occasion when it received an $18,000,000 anonymous gift, constituting the largest per enrolled student gift in the history of higher education.

In the business field the college plans for the establishment of an endowed School of Business with the objective of strengthening an excellent existing program by combining the theoretical with the practical. Special attention will be directed to maintaining high quality faculty and attracting guest business executives, giving students the best insight and information available.

The plans also specify an endowment for an American Heritage Lecture series, Internships and Career Counseling. The program is intended to provide students with first hand experience of the operation of the free enterprise system through cooperative arrangements with national and multi-national corporations.

For the pre-medical/health sciences, the college plans to establish in addition to its present quality program, a scientist-in-residence program, the funding of honor scholarships, the development of programs designed to attract and solicit interest in original student research, the formation of an internship program for students in teaching hospitals, while instituting additional seminars and conferences.

Small academies and seminaries were the principle founding institutions for most of our great universities. All were born within church organizations and for religious purposes. Those who founded Christian Colleges, and those who attended them, saw something special in the church schools.

In maintaining this heritage for the future, Buena Vista College through planning and good fortune took a giant step forward on May 17, 1980.

HON INDUSTRIES
In Muscatine, HON is the HON INDUSTRIES Corporate Staff, The HON Company and The Prime-Mover Co. Divisions.
Greetings:

As Mayor of the City of Muscatine, I would like to officially congratulate the Mus-Quo-Ta Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution of our City. We all enjoy the warm hospitality for which your Chapter has become justifiably famous.

Muscatine has played a major role in shaping our nation's growth and development. Much has been written about the City's cultural heritage and its contributions to the social and physical development of the United States, but little has been said of its architectural assets. It is therefore fitting that the City's historic contributions be recognized also, through its architectural heritage that surrounds us today. Preservation of these architectural assets can provide the citizens of Muscatine, the citizens of Iowa, and the nation with the physical evidence of our contributions—both today and for future generations.

My very best wishes.

Most sincerely,

Evelyn L. Schauland
Mayor

Samuel de Sinnette was a descendant of a French aristocratic family of Huguenots who fled to Ireland when the Edict of Nantes was revoked by Louis XIV. He changed his name to Samuel Sinnette when he immigrated to America. He settled in Muscatine County in 1840 and 15 years later built this octagon plan house. He designed the house in a combination of Greek Revival and Italianate styles. The former style is observed in the colonnaded veranda and brick pilasters at the building’s corners; the latter is in the brackets and belvedere, and to a lesser extent in the gently sloping roof form. (It should be noted that the dormers have been added.) The design of this house, which is one of 27 octagon houses known in Iowa, may have been inspired by houses Sinnette observed in his native Ireland.

The house has recently been remodeled into a restaurant. Fortunately, its exterior has not been adversely altered.
In 1908 Peter Musser, an early lumberman in Muscatine, built a house at 1314 Mulberry Avenue for his daughter Laura McColm.

Laura was quite musical and in 1921 she added the music room and had a pipe organ installed. Many receptions, teas, and musical events were given for her friends.

After her death the home was given to the city of Muscatine for a museum by Mary Gilmore, a niece, and Mary Catherine McWhirter, a step-daughter.

Membership support comes from the Muscatine County and Fine Arts Association. A celebration was held this year to commemorate the 14th Anniversary of the Laura Musser Museum.
Pine Creek Mill built in 1838 one of Iowa's oldest and most interesting water power mills is to be preserved by the Iowa Conservation Board. A state park has been made of the area around about, inclusive of the mill and mill dam. "Wild Cat Den Park" it has been named, in keeping with local traditions.

The present mill was the third one built by Benjamin Nye on Pine River. He and his wife came to what is now Muscatine County in March, 1834, they being the first settlers in the county. As other settlers moved in, the great problem was to get their grain ground for bread. At first they solved it by traveling to Chicago, a very long trip taking as long as six months.

Beset with such trials, Benjamin Nye devised a hand mill in which buckwheat and corn could be ground. Then in 1837 he built a grist mill near the mouth of Pine River.
Dr. James Weed arrived in Muscatine in 1839 and practiced dentistry for three years. In 1842, he purchased approximately 400 acres of land on the bluff east of town. He established a nursery on this acreage and called it the Iowa Pomological and Horticultural Gardens. Later he donated a substantial portion of this area to the city which is now Weed Park. In 1853 he commissioned Josiah Walton to build this house on his property. It is an exceptional example of Gothic Revival as evidenced in its steeply pitched roof, bargeboard tracy, tall and narrow gable ends, and similarly proportioned windows topped with straight-sided pointed arches (a modification of the pointed gothic arch).

MRS. PAUL HOWARD LONG
State Regent 1980 - 1982

The President General's chosen theme is complimented by our State Regent's theme:
“A people without history is like wind on the buffalo grass.”

This quotation by Nebraska's documentary author/historian, MARI SANDOZ, is from the Teton Sioux Indians.
Re-dedication of the monument at the site of the Horse Creek Treaty in 1979.
Mr. M. L. Brown, State Historian & Mrs. H. Gentry, Regent, Katahdin Chapter.

Never in all American history had there been a gathering like that held at Fort Laramie in August 1851. Amazement reigned as 270 of the U. S. Army top brass watched more than 10,000 mounted Indians arrive to negotiate a treaty to provide a safe route on the Oregon and Mormon Trails for the white man. Included were the mighty Sioux from the northeast; the slim, graceful Assiniboins from the northwest; the tall Cheyennes from the plains; the Mandan, Hidatsa, and Arikaras from the north; the dark-skinned Shoshones from the west; the stately Arapahos from the southwest; and the Crows from the west. Since the grass was short at Fort Laramie, the meeting was moved 34 miles east along the Platte to the mouth of Horse Creek where the meadows would support the thousands of horses while a just and permanent peace was sought.

In May 1928 the members of Katahdin Chapter dedicated a monument at this site. At the re-dedication in September 1979 Margaret Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Mark, recalled being present in 1928 as her mother, Chapter Historian, unveiled the monument. Mr. Mark, editor and historian, had picked out the boulder and written the inscription. The 20-ton boulder was moved to Gering by the Union Pacific, prepared by Herstead Monument Co. and moved to the site by a man and his 3 sons using a huge iron-wheeled steam tractor and tandem wagons. During the years vandals had pried off the bronze plaque which was found in a barrow pit and stored by the county until 1979 when it was returned to Katahdin. Herstead Co. restored the monument as a gift to the chapter and were present at the re-dedication along with the 4 men who moved the stone in 1928.

THE DUNN-ANDERSON STORY
By Virginia Dunn Kraut

An attractive hard-cover book about the Dunns and Andersons of Graves County, Kentucky.

The Dunn Story starts with Benjamin Dunn (War of 1812) b. c. 1785 and traces through son Jackson L. and on down to William Carroll, William Thomas and William Ferris.

The Anderson Story starts with John Anderson (killed in the Rev. War) b. 1732 and traces through son, Vincent and on down to Crawford, Holland Livingston, Florence Clementine and her son William Ferris Dunn (mentioned above).

The first 170 pages of this book give the Dunn and Anderson stories, biographical sketches of each ancestor and all ancestor charts. Side lines of the Dunns include Clay, Stoneham, Sheppard, Anderson and Mansfield. Side lines of the Andersons include Carney, Terry, Cunningham, Adams and Dunn.

The rest of the book concerns the 12 Dunn-Anderson children born in Graves County, Kentucky in the late 19th century and in Illinois in the early 20th century, and their descendants. There are numerous photographs and the Dunn and Anderson Coats of Arms are in color with their history as well as that of both names.

Mrs. Anthony Arthur Aspero, Attorney and Regent of Alexander McCullar Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, presented the DAR Medal of Honor to Dr. McCarthy DeMere, an internationally known Plastic Surgeon. This was the first time the DAR Medal has been awarded to a Memphian.

Dr. DeMere is a descendant of Major John Barnard of Georgia and was recently elected Vice President of the Memphis Chapter of SAR. His sister, Mrs. John Thomas Dwyer, and his three nieces are members of Alexander McCullar Chapter DAR.

The highest honor DAR can confer upon a native born citizen, this National Medal is awarded for outstanding demonstration of Leadership, Service, Patriotism, and Trustworthiness.

The event occurred at the American History Month Alexander McCullar Luncheon on February 9, 1980, which was covered by the Press, as well as by Television. Eighty-two were present including five Judges, several Lawyers, many Doctors, Clergy, and other prominent Memphians.

Dr. DeMere is also a Lawyer and is well known as the author of Definition of Death which has been enacted into Law in five states. He is an outstanding citizen as well as a Plastic Surgeon.

Alexander McCullar Chapter's Charter appears in upper background.

The original limited edition of 5000 "Molly Pitcher" Pitchers is still open. We have approximately 2000 pieces left which we are offering at original prices for those who may have missed our offer or may like the pitcher for a Christmas gift or other gift giving occasion. See our special gift giving order form below.

"EXCLUSIVE OFFER"
LIMITED EDITION — 5000 PIECES

Molly Hays went to war with her artilleryman husband. During the historic battle of Monmouth (June 28, 1778 — a fiercely hot day), she carried water to thirsty soldiers in the pitcher that was to change her name in history books.

Never before has a commemorative been more symbolic. Plates, coins, bottles have been issued to commemorate people and events, but this collectible is truly unique, since the pitcher alone, commemorates both person and event. This limited edition pitcher is mouth blown, as evidenced by the pontil mark.* It is hand crafted by the famed Clevenger Bros. Glass Works of Clayton, N.J. exclusively for American Bison Corp.

The Pitcher has been well received at the last 2 DAR National Congresses which we attended. Comments by members were:

"What a beautiful color."
"The glass is so heavy and thick."
"Each one is truly an original."

Customer satisfaction is demonstrated by some of the comments we received below:

"It is a most interesting pitcher, different from any among my collection." St. Petersburg, Fla.
"Both recipients I gave the pitcher to were thrilled with your creation." Lodi, Calif.
"I love my Pitcher." Port Townsend, Wash.
"Quite a conversation piece." Salem, Mass.

Because each pitcher is hand made, no two are identical; each one possesses a unique characteristic of its own.

WE GUARANTEE DELIVERY AND SAFE ARRIVAL

NOTE: ORDERS MUST BE POSTMARKED NO LATER THAN NOVEMBER 15, 1980 TO GUARANTEE CHRISTMAS DELIVERY.

HEIGHT-6" COLOR: JERSEY GREEN

The Molly Pitcher scene shown above and George Washington at the Battle of Monmouth on the reverse side are embossed in the glass.

*Each pitcher must be broken off the metal rod which holds it during the process of blowing. This leaves a "pontil" mark which is the trademark of a mouth-blown pitcher. Each pitcher bears the pontil mark.
