COVER STORY

The National Society is "Continuing the Commitment" with the Renovation of Constitution Hall. Begun on June 22, 1994, Phase I of this major project is projected to be completed by November 1994.

The need to build Constitution Hall became evident to the National Society in the 1920s. At the 1925 Continental Congress, the new auditorium was authorized.

John Russell Pope was chosen as architect; his plans were accepted in April 1926. The cornerstone was laid on October 30, 1928 with the First Lady, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, as honor guest. Dedication followed on April 19, 1929 with the Continental Congress of 1930 the first to convene there.

The cover photo of Constitution Hall, which honors our immortal United States Constitution, is by Robert W. Fones, Jr., Advertising Coordinator.

On June 28, 1994, the President General crossed the English Channel during the 50th Anniversary Commemoration of D-Day:

It is most fitting, as we cross this same channel used on D-Day, to remember the hundreds of brave men who did not complete the journey of that fateful day 50 years ago. No rows of white crosses mark the graves of these men who paid the ultimate price before reaching land. Loved ones cannot visit their graves, kneel in prayer or leave a bouquet of flowers in loving remembrance.

The National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, with deepest humility places this wreath in memory of these brave souls who rest in the waters below. God speed.

Dear Lord, keep these courageous souls safe at Thy side as they rest in your arms. Amen.
Dear Daughters,

I hope you've had a wonderful summer with family and friends and are refreshed and ready for the busy fall season just ahead. Schools will be opening very soon and now would be great time to ensure that this coming school year is filled with patriotic and historical events and programs for the youth of your area.

With chapters in over 3000 communities across this great land of ours the DAR is in a unique and advantaged position to exert a positive influence on the education of a new generation of Americans. These young patriots will determine the future of this country as they mature into the decision makers of the 21st century. We must make the most of this opportunity or others with less worthwhile agendas will gladly fill the void we leave.

Our organization is just brimming with capable and energetic women who know what must be done if we are to become more of a force in the preservation and enhancement of our American culture. We know and hold dear those ideals which have made the United States of America the envy of the world. We must convey this wisdom to the youth of America. I urge you to increase your efforts throughout the educational systems in your community. You will make a difference.

During the most recent Continental Congress we initiated and launched an important new program on behalf of the Renovation of Constitution Hall. A Renovation of Constitution Hall Benefactor Pin has been designed and issued. It is available to all members (and to non-members as well) in return for your contribution of $1000 or more toward this most vital and necessary cause. Please see page 487 of this issue of the magazine for detailed information on this program and a sample form which could be copied and made available to all your members. Remember the Matching Funds Program when you make your contribution. The use of Matching Funds can be a very effective way of doubling the impact of your support.

I hope you enjoy the FYI column in this issue as we continue to try to keep you informed of events at National. We are all trying to make our Society more relevant in today's America and in charting her course for the future. It's an exciting journey which wouldn't stand a chance of succeeding without your widespread support. I thank each of you for your helpful suggestions and your unflinching support of our beloved Society.

Sincerely,

Wayne B. Blair

THE FLAG OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA COMMITTEE

The Flag of the United States of America Committee is celebrating 85 years of commitment to honor and respect our country's flag and educate others in its correct usage.

The Daughters' commitment began years earlier at the first Continental Congress February 22-24, 1892, in the Church of Our Father at 13th and L Streets, Washington, DC.

Flags were in abundance at the meeting and the first sentence of the only resolution written and adopted there read, "The Flag of our Country is the emblem of our Nation, and deserves the homage of every true American citizen; . . ."

The resolution "earnestly" requested all American citizens, "native born and adopted . . . to show their respect and love for our country by rising and standing" during the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner."

A further resolve recommended "that the song be sung at least once a week in all the public schools . . . so that all American children may learn the words of the song, and learn to honor the Stars and Stripes."

Over the intervening years, hundreds of thousands of Daughters were vigilant in protecting the Stars and Stripes, a precious heritage.

The present committee began in 1909 as the Committee to Prevent Desecration of the Flag. In 1920, the name was changed to the Committee on the Correct Use of the Flag.

That was called a happy change, suggesting enlightenment and not ignorance. The National Chairman noted that it pictured "minds and hearts lifted up in love and reverence for our beautiful flag, rather than furtive evasion of the law."

It was 36 years later, in 1956, that the present committee name was first used.

The Clearing House Committee at that time recommended the name be changed to "United States Flag" Committee. A first amendment was to add "of America" to the name. It was felt that, even five years from then, the term "United States" might indicate the United States of the World.

A second amendment was to put the word "Flag" in its proper position, since the committee was to emphasize flag concerns. Hence, it became, and has remained, The Flag of the United States of America Committee.

Back in 1892, patriotism was at a low ebb. The Daughters began a reawakening that February with their first resolution.

In 1896, on December 4th, a Milwaukee DAR chapter made the first appeal to the United States Congress for an effective Flag Law. It was introduced Congressionally the next year. The 1932 National Chairman reported that the DAR was the first society to ask for the passage of such a law.

Daughters pushed for a federal law continually. Written proposals were made to Congress for years, and bills introduced in the House and Senate frequently. The bills, however, remained buried in committees.

A chairman told members that such bills are "the duty of our patriotic society until proper protection of our flag is secured."

It was not just the Flag Committee that was concerned but the National Society as a whole. Daughters wrote and re-wrote letters to their Representatives asking for strong legislation. Women in those years had no voting clout. But these women persisted! The chairman in 1912 reported that “no reflecting woman can but feel, that it is because we are women and have no votes that we are put aside . . . like little children.”

She told a Congressman that “nearly 100,000 women who are earnestly seeking . . . cannot always be put aside or brook such treatment for long.” She said it “awakened him.”

The 1910 report noted the work of a chapter chairman from Tennessee. This Daughters got permission from the State School Superintendent for a simple plan to instill respect for the flag.

As classes were dismissed, students stood, looked toward the flag hanging in the room and said, “One Country! One Language! One Flag!” As they filed past the flag to leave, each pupil gave the West Point salute.

That Flag Chairman made a difference in Tennessee long before the state enacted any flag law and before there was any federal law.

The words used in that pledge were part of what was called the “Balch” salute. The complete sentence was “I give my heart and my hand to my Country,—One Country, one language, one flag.” It was 1916 before Francis Bellamy’s Pledge of Allegiance was more widely used.

A Massachusetts Daughter wrote a flag code in 1912 which the National Society approved for distribution in schools. For years afterward, requests for copies came from across the country, and the code was framed and hung on hundreds of classroom walls. In one year alone, 200,000 copies were given out.

The Daughters wanted the United States Congress to officially adopt that code as the correct use of the flag. Some of those early suggestions are recognizable in today’s federal laws. Pressure continued on Congress for years. Committee chairmen often told of letters received from different Representatives relating their efforts to have a flag bill passed.

A major concern was to prohibit the use of the flag as a trademark or for business advertisements. The latter was called the most common and most offensive violation, “a greed for gain.” The Daughters felt that the “honor and dignity of our National insignia must not be infringed upon by any class of business interests.”

In 1916 the chairman listed hundreds of ways the flag was desecrated, particularly with advertisements printed on the white stripes and the flag imprinted on various items. Thirty pages in Appendix Q of the Proceedings of the 25th Continental Congress were filled with abuses and corrections.

That same year, 50,000 copies of Pennsylvania’s Flag Law were printed by the State Legislature for the Daughters to distribute. It was a service the Daughters began a few years before. (By 1913, 35 states had laws to protect the flag from desecration.)

Five-minute Flag Information Lessons composed by the 1927 chairman proved extremely popular at chapter meetings. So much so that an extra thousand sets were sent to newspapers, schools, colleges, libraries and clubs on request.

In 1928, DAR representatives attended a conference at the Navy Building in Washington where Congress’s Resolution No. 11, to adopt an official Flag Code of the United States, was reviewed line by line.

Attending were representatives from the Navy, the Army, Boy Scouts, American Legion, American Flag Conference Chairman, lawyers and the Sons of the American Revolution.

When the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee was asked if the DAR had been heard from on the resolution, he said, “We have baskets and baskets of letters. I say—you can always depend upon the Daughters of the American Revolution.”

At the end of the conference, everyone agreed on the proposed Flag Code, with but one exception. The War Department wanted fringe on the Flag.

This Flag Code resolution remained pending in a House committee for years. But the Daughters persisted with the DAR Flag Code! By 1935 the publication also was being distributed to Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) Camps throughout the country, with the government’s co-operation. Jessica Dragonette, a popular singer, re-arranged a scheduled program to broadcast a New York song over coast-to-coast radio on Flag Day, 1936. Mrs. Frederick H. Schluter, the committee's vice-chairman, set to music "The Flag," a poem written by Mrs. Edith Scott Magna, an Honorary President General. In a telegram, Miss Dragonette said she sang it "in special honor of the members of the D.A.R."

Daughters were patriotic while traveling, too. The 1938 report told of a Rhode Island chapter flag chairman's visit to Selby Abbey, England.

She gathered her American traveling companions about her and all repeated the Pledge of Allegiance as they saluted our country's flag underneath the coat-of-arms of George Washington.

Early efforts for a national flag law were an emotional roller coaster of ups and downs, mostly downs. In the meantime, more and more state laws were passed regulating use of the flag.

New York's governor had proclaimed June 14th for annual Flag Day celebrations beginning in 1897. But it wasn't until 1915 that President Woodrow Wilson proclaimed a national Flag Day. And it was 1949 before the National Flag Bill, signed by President Harry Truman, made the day official.

The '40s were a time of upheaval attended by a tremendous patriotic fervor. A 1941 letter about the incorrect display of the flag at Fort Dix, New Jersey, brought a reply from a Headquarters Major. His letter closed with thanks for calling attention to the error. "It is a comforting thought that so many citizens take the trouble to write about any improper display of the flag," he wrote.

The Daughters applauded fervently when the 77th U.S. Congress enacted two federal laws on the display and use of the Flag of the United States of America. However, no enforcement powers were provided.

"No federal law had been passed before," the National Chairman reported to Continental Congress in May, 1942. Daughters distributed thousands of copies of the law in the next few years.

The first law codified rules of the Flag Code. The second one, Peoples Law 829, changed the civilian salute to placing the right hand over the heart.

The DAR had used the military salute outlined by the War Department and also used a salute popular in the '30s; that of placing the right hand on the heart and, at the words "to the flag," extending the hand with palm up.

National Archives' photographs show school students saluting that way although some pupils held their palms down.

The Congressional Record, August 7, 1954, includes a newspaper article which gives a Wrightsville Beach woman in North Carolina credit for originating the civilian salute of hand over the heart.

It happened during World War I when Elizabeth Cantwell's husband was a naval airman. At parade ceremonies when the flag passed by, she instinctively stood at attention and placed her hand over her heart. The military salute was awkward for women dressed in the finery of the day and variously-shaped, large hats.

She thought it would be a wonderful thing for American women to use that natural gesture for the flag salute. "Surely," she said, "the flag is near the woman's heart."

The flag is near the Daughters' hearts. Two of three Continental Congress resolutions in 1948 asked for powers of enforcement for Public Law 829 and a requirement to place the flag on the right of the speaker or presiding officer.

The third focused on the flag's place of honor on the right within the jurisdiction of the United States. That was promptly when the United Nations flag usurped the honored position.

The National Chairman wrote to the U.S. Department of State enclosing a copy of the United Nations flag protocol. The State Department replied "they knew nothing of the flag protocol of the United Nations until her copy arrived," she reported.

The letter "claimed that they presumed and assumed that it (the UN Flag) would only be used in Lake Success, which is international territory." She wasn't criticizing that, she said, but "within the territorial limits of the United States, outside of Lake Success" the Flag of the USA "should have the place of honor always."

By 1952, the chairman said the place of honor for the U.S. Flag, if the UN banner is present, "is much better understood. The Defense Department directed that the UN flag must not be displayed in this country except on special UN occasions and, when displayed, it must be with the UNITED STATES FLAG IN THE PLACE OF HONOR." (The capital letters are the chairman's.)

Two years later, Public Law 107 designated the position of the Flag of the USA when displayed with the United Nations flag.

The Daughters' vigilance never ceased. In a United States court room in 1962, a DAR member brought to the attention of the presiding judge the absence of a flag. He ordered it promptly displayed and publicly commended the member for her alertness and patriotism.

President General Mrs. William H. Sullivan, Jr., in 1965, heartily approved her National Chairman's action in protesting and ultimately stopping the manufacture and sale of a new clothing item for women.

It was a pop art panty girdle of red, white and blue, with the name "Stars and Stripes." It had eight blue stars on a white background and red and white vertical stripes. A story in the August 26th edition of the New York Times was headlined " 'Stars 'n Stripes' Girdle Banned on DAR Protest." Hundreds of letters from patriotic men and women praised the stand taken by the DAR.

Thirty flag desk sets were sent by one chapter to a U.S. military unit in Vietnam in 1966. A soldier there missed seeing the American Flag flying. The land on which the bases were built was leased and not U.S. soil so the flag could not be flown. His mother suggested he obtain permission to have a flag desk set, since his desk was U.S. property. His Commanders, believing this would be good for morale and esprit de corps, requested the additional sets.

Three years later, 1969, the Daughters corrected 1,500 desecrations and misuses throughout the nation. One misuse at a traveling Art Show had two flags zipped together, stuffed with styrofoam and tied in the middle with a heavy logger's

Address by U.S. Representative Henry Hyde of Illinois

I am more than a little pleased to have this opportunity to thank all of you for the support you gave the cause of freedom during the long, hard, twilight struggle that was the Cold War.

It is, somehow, unfashionable these days to talk about the Cold War, much less about the victory that was won in that struggle by the forces of freedom. This is a mistake.

Part of the reason why the American people seem disinterested in world affairs these days is that the American people were never told, by their political leaders, that they had won a great victory with the collapse of European communism. We never properly celebrated the fact that free men and women successfully resisted totalitarian power, and did so without fundamentally damaging our own political values.

I believe that the Cold War was well worth fighting, and well worth winning. And I believe that all Americans, and indeed all free people, owe a great debt of gratitude to people like you, who resisted the tides of fashion and who supported a vigorous defense of the Free World against its mortal enemies. Thank you for defending freedom.

The end of the Cold War hasn’t meant the end of international conflict; nor has it made a strong U.S. foreign policy unnecessary. But the crises and the conflicts aren’t all there is. For the collapse of the old Cold War system has created new opportunities as well as crises.

CONSOLIDATING OUR COLD WAR VICTORY. This is not just wishful thinking. History—and, some of us would say, Providence—has put before us an opportunity to take a significant step forward in what Churchill called the “hard march of man.” In this case, the step forward would be progress toward a world that is increasingly characterized by the rule of law rather than the rule of brute force. We won’t ever finally “domesticate” international politics. But we can surely make progress out of Thomas Hobbes’s infamous jungle in which all are at war with all.

We have, for example, an opportunity to consolidate the victory of freedom in the Cold War by securing the future stability of the new democracies in east central Europe. The proposal to expand NATO was often described, pejoratively, as “drawing NATO’s eastern border closer to the old Soviet Union.” I prefer to think of it as enlarging the sphere of democratic stability in Europe. A new NATO that includes Poland, the Czech Republic, Hungary, Slovakia, and perhaps Slovenia, would be no more a threat to Russia than the old NATO—which was, and which will remain, a defensive alliance.

We also have an opportunity in the 1990s to consolidate the victory of free societies throughout the Western Hemisphere, from Canada to the southern tip of Chile. We can all look forward to the day when the Castro regime is thrown onto the dustbin of history, thus freeing the Cuban people to take their rightful place among the free societies of the New World. U.S. foreign policy in the 1980s, emphasizing the importance of democratic consolidations, basic human rights protections, and free economies throughout Latin America, has helped that continent take a tremendous leap forward. It should be our policy in the 1990s to strengthen the gains that have been made for all the peoples of the Western Hemisphere.

OUR CONTINUING NEED FOR SDI. But there are, as I say, threats to be confronted. And perhaps the most dangerous is the threat posed by the lethal equation of weapons of mass destruction + ballistic missiles + crazy regimes. I have in mind such states as North Korea, Libya, Iraq, and Iran. Nuclear non-proliferation efforts are essential when confronting the threat posed by regimes like these, and there is no treaty whose provisions are worth enforcing more rigorously than those of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty.

But something more is needed. In a world in which deranged or ideologically-driven leaders of small countries can acquire ballistic missiles and weapons of mass destruction—which could be atomic, chemical, or biological—it is criminally irresponsible for the United States Government not to pursue, as one of its highest national security priorities, effective systems of ballistic missile defense. Our first Ambassador to the newly-created Soviet Union in the 1930s, Ambassador William Bullitt, once wrote: "To beat our swords into plowshares while the spiritual descendants of Ghengis Khan stalk the earth is to die and leave no descendants."

I am not talking here about the cartoonists' caricature of "Star Wars." We are not talking about an attempt to build an impenetrable anti-missile "Astrodome" over the United States. Rather, we are talking about rapidly developing the technologies that were being explored in the Strategic Defense Initiative, in order to provide effective defense against limited missile strikes by states like North Korea, Libya, Iraq, or Iran in the next few years.

The resistance to this proposal is, frankly, incomprehensible to me. Perhaps some of the critics can't bring themselves to admit that Ronald Reagan may have been right about something. But, however that may be, it is utterly irresponsible to deny the American people and our allies an effective defense against blackmail or attack. We can have that defense. We must have it. And those who don't want it are not taking seriously the world in which we live.

The "national security" of the United States is also threatened at home. We have too much crime, and too few policemen. We have college board scores that are way too low, and out-of-wedlock birth rates that are catastrophically high. As Congressman Newt Gingrich has pointed out, a society in which 14 year olds have babies, 15 year olds shoot each other over a pair of gym shoes, and 18 year olds get diplomas they can't read doesn't have a very bright future. We have an America that is becoming ever more balkanized along lines of race, gender, and ethnicity, thanks to a quota mentality that looks into a human being's face and sees, not an individual, but a member of a group.

DOES VIRTUE MATTER? All of this means that it's time, once again, to revisit the ancient question of virtue and the virtues.

For the past thirty years or so, a certain segment of American opinion, usually found in the universities, the mass media, and the courts, has argued that there is no real connection between virtue and democracy. Democracy, they tell us, is just a matter of procedures—if democracy isn't about procedures—if democracy isn't about being the kind of people who can be self-governing—then how do we answer our children when they ask us, "Why be tolerant?", "Why be civil?", "What's in it for me"?

The founders of the American Republic knew about the connection between virtue and democracy. They knew that, in a monarchy, it can suffice to have a virtuous king; but you cannot have a democracy without a virtuous people. You cannot have a democracy without a sufficient critical mass of democrats (with a small d). And democrats are made, not born: democrats are made in the school of the virtues.

When freedom is untethered from virtue, freedom degenerates into license. Then license, in turn, becomes the undoing of freedom: for if freedom is simply license, social life becomes merely an assertion of your power against my power, force becomes the sole arbiter between right and wrong, and chaos ensues. The law exists to protect the weak from the strong—not to sanction their exploitation. As Dostoyevsky's Grand Inquisitor knew, over a hundred years ago, men cannot abide chaos. Rather than live in chaos, they will ask for chains.

So we are playing for very high stakes, indeed, when we insist that the renewal of American democracy involves, first and foremost, a renewal of personal and civic virtue in the people of the United States.

Nobody ever said that there were any guarantees about America. The experiment could fail. It already has failed in some parts of our cities where the writ of the Constitution does not run. The question that Lincoln asked at Gettysburg, whether a nation so conceived and so dedicated could long endure, is a question for every generation of Americans.

Congress Happenings . . .

• The bylaws amendments, as proposed by the Committee, were all adopted with one exception. The committee had suggested that Article 13, Section 11 be amended by striking out the word “registrar” following the word “chapter.” As it was, only the chapter registrar was the one who should report to the Organizing Secretary General, all changes in membership as they occur. The rationale for the change was that, at times, it might be more expedient if another officer could take over that duty.

• Videos of the 103rd Continental Congress are available from the Office of the Corresponding Secretary General at a cost of $15.00.

• Constitution Hall was closed on June 22nd and will not re-open until November. Renovation is going forward with Phase I and upon completion of this phase, the building will be in compliance with all DC and Federal laws for fire code, ADA and OSHA requirements. The dressing rooms will receive a new look and will be more energy efficient; the old wiring will be ripped out and new lines installed. Additional dressing rooms will be added back stage and the stage will be replaced and extended. A time table of payments was given us by the architects with $75,000 due in May; $200,000 in June; $650,000 in July; $350,000 in August; $600,000 in September and $469,000 in October for a grand total of $2,344,924.

Adopted at the April National Board of Management Meeting . . .

• That “the only endorsement required of candidates for national office is that a candidate for the office of Vice President General be endorsed by ballot vote of her State Conference (National Bylaws. Article VI, Section 2). Candidates for national office and for Honorary Vice President General should not request endorsements from individuals (i.e., an Honorary President General, National Officer, past National Officer or State Officer).

Endorsement of candidates on national DAR tickets is not required by the Bylaws. A state conference should not at any time endorse a national DAR ticket.

The word “endorse” should not be used in literature, announcements and/or advertisements except when referring to the required state conference endorsement of candidates for Vice President General.

Members of the current executive committee, except for a member of that committee who herself is a candidate, are to remain neutral and will neither wear nor display campaign objects nor will they take part in a campaign.”

• That “an individual wishing to make a contribution of $1,000.00 or more to the Constitution Hall Renovation Fund will receive the Benefactor pin made by J. E. Caldwell Co., which may be worn on the official ribbon below the “Ties That Bind” pin.

An individual gift of $1,000 or more . . . qualifies the donor to receive the Constitution Hall Renovation Fund Benefactor pin . . .

A donation of $5,000 or more will qualify the donor for a pin and the name of the donor on a plaque to be placed in Constitution Hall.”

• “The funds raised during the Blair Administration for the Renovation of Constitution Hall will remain in the “Renovation of Constitution Hall Fund.” The fund is to be used solely for the renovation and maintenance, as required, of Constitution Hall.

• “That instructions and application forms for all NSDAR contests and scholarships on the national, state and chapter level contain the following statement: ‘DO NOT SUBMIT A PERSONAL PHOTOGRAPH. MEMBERSHIP DUES INCREASE

Ann A. Hunter, National Chairman, Finance Committee

Delegates to the 103rd Continental Congress overwhelmingly adopted an amendment to the National Bylaws raising members’ annual dues to $25.00.

This was a necessary and progressive amendment, that will place the NSDAR on a firm financial footing for the foreseeable future provided the members support it. It is vitally important that members stay on the role and support their National Society.

If you regularly read the minutes of the National Board of Management reported in this magazine, including the report of the Finance Chairman, you understand why the increase was necessary.

One year ago the report of the Treasurer General showed a loss to the current fund for the first time in many years. The deficit for fiscal year 1992–93 was $197,147. At that time, it was apparent that expenses would continue to rise, and that income would continue to fall short. In April 1994 the National Board of Management adopted a deficit budget, projecting that expenses for the year just ended would exceed revenues by $277,000.

All departments of the National Society were made aware of the financial crisis. The number of employees on the payroll of the National Society was allowed to decrease through attrition. Supplies were purchased centrally, to effect cost-savings. Telephone long distance bills were scrutinized.

But these are nickel and dime items in a multi-million dollar budget. Current fund expenses to the National Society are more than $5 million a year. No matter what, the building must be cleaned, electrified, heated and secured. And, no matter what, employees must be paid. In fact, for the year just ended, salaries and their attendant benefits were the largest item paid for by the current fund: almost $3.2 million. Since annual membership dues for the same period amounted to just under $3 million, it is immediately apparent that at the rate of $15 annual dues per member, the DAR was going $200,000 in the red each year through salary and benefit expenses alone, without paying any utility or maintenance costs.

That is why, last April, this committee reluctantly recommended that, based on the presentation of a deficit budget, consideration be given to increasing the income of the National Society by a membership dues increase of $5.00 per member.

As the year progressed, the short-fall increased, to a loss of $412,306 at the close of the fiscal year on February 28, 1994.

The deficit for fiscal year 1994–95, the current fiscal year, is projected at $478,164. The new dues structure will have little effect on the current deficit because the new dues are payable for 1994–95. The action of the 103rd Continental Congress came just in time.

Fortunately, certain DAR endowments, the Investment Trust Fund and the Second Century Endowment Fund, provide some assistance to the current fund. The past year saw growth in both. However, the current deficit is greater than the endowments can make up.

The following figures change with changing conditions. In February 1994, each member paid $15 in annual dues, but costs of administering the National Society for the members (the actual cost of membership) amounted to $25.41 per member per year. Since the purpose of collecting membership dues is to pay those administrative costs, it is fair and reasonable to ask the members to pay the full cost of their membership. That is why, in February, when the proposed amendments to the Bylaws were presented to the National Board for its recommendation, a dues increase was included. At the insistence of the State Regents, the Board amended the proposed dues increase from $5.00 per year to $10.00 per year. When the question was put, there was not a single dissenting vote.

Full discussion of the proposed increase took place on the floor of the 103rd Continental Congress. Although several members addressed remarks opposing the increase, no one proposed an amendment reducing the size of the increase. More members spoke in favor of the increase to $25 than spoke against it. And when the vote was taken, the amendment passed overwhelmingly. The verbatim discussion is published in the Proceedings of the 103rd Continental Congress, which is available for purchase.

With the dues increase in place, the future will be brighter, but only if each member makes a personal commitment to support it.
JUNIOR AMERICAN CITIZENS

Andrea Egan Weyhing, National Chairman

JAC is alive, well and growing. The 1993-4 contest theme was “Flags in American History.” This year's entries totaled 19,974. Four hundred fifty-four students received national recognition with certificates and a monetary gift; one hundred seventy-nine additional students received Honorable Mention Certificates, a total National recognition of 633 students.

The Emblem

The only time I catch your eye is when the wind blows through me.
My stars and stripes are all you see
But there is much more to me.

Many wars my life has see(n)
As I stood for liberty.
My first war was to set us free
From England and its tyranny.

I'm also used in times of grief
When my countrymen they weep
Over those who've fallen asleep
And loved their country oh so deep.

To some I depict a land of hope,
A place of dreams and endless freedom.
I spur these people all to come
To start new lives, each and every one.

As I fly above the world
See me for what I am,
An emblem of a glorious land
That was created by God's hand.

The Thatcher Award was established to recognize outstanding service and dedication to the Junior American Citizen program.

The Los Angeles Chapter, California, Mrs. William Conti, Regent, was the 1994 winner. She explains the project shown below:

"These children are all part of a special tutorial program for children who are underprivileged and in needy circumstances. Many of the children are from abusive homes and considered at high risk as potential gang members or school drop-outs. They have nothing. Many of them don't always have food. They are extremely exuberant about our JAC program; and, in fact, I have testimonials from the Assistant Principal and other staff members that our JAC program can be credited with altering the course of a child's life. . . [_______ was a winner in last year's contest] to continue . . . . [_______ has now risen from a C,D student to an A,B, student and LOVES school. All of the experts had predicted that he would not complete the 6th grade and would drop out of school. They have all told me the reason . . . . is IN school—and even planning to go to college—is because of his experience with the DAR and our JAC program. . . ."
Questions and Answers

QUESTION: Our chapter treasurer refuses to turn over the treasurer’s books to the incoming treasurer. She has stated that she received no books upon assuming office: she is willing, however, to give the final figures to the incoming treasurer and has furnished the bank cards to transfer the accounts. How may we obtain the books?

ANSWER: Even if the outgoing treasurer “purchased” the books, the accounts entered in the books belong to the chapter. An auditing committee should be appointed, a request for the books can be made by the regent of the auditing committee and an explanation given to the outgoing treasurer that the audit must be made before the incoming treasurer assumes the keeping of the records. The audit has the effect of relieving the treasurer of responsibility for the period covered by her report and approves the work of the treasurer. A statement to that effect may be included in the report of the audit. The reports of the treasurer are never adopted but filed and the audit is adopted and approves the work of the treasurer. A statement to that effect may be included in the report of the audit. R.O.N.R. pages 467-470.

QUESTION: Are the minutes of a society given to the public?

ANSWER: The minutes are the official record of the proceedings of the society. The minutes do not become the minutes and assume their essential status as the official record until they have been approved, R.O.N.R. pages 348-350. It is important to remember that if copies of the minutes are furnished to members prior to approval, that only the formal copy placed in the minute books contains all corrections which were made and that none of the many copies circulated to members and marked by them is authoritative. R.O.N.R. page 464.

“Any member has a right to examine the minutes of the society at a reasonable time and place, but this privilege must not be abused to the annoyance of the secretary.” R.O.N.R. page 451. No one has the right to give a copy or show a copy of the minutes of a deliberative society to the public. An excerpt from the minutes, with the permission of the society, could be furnished when necessary. It is important to remember that if copies of the minutes are furnished to members prior to approval, that only the formal copy placed in the minute books contains all corrections which were made and that none of the many copies circulated to members and marked by them is authoritative. R.O.N.R. page 464.

QUESTION: Should a “delegate” be free to vote without “instructions” from the chapter?

ANSWER: A delegate is free to vote as she sees fit on questions at the state conference or Continental Congress, except as the chapter may have instructed her in regard to particular matters scheduled for consideration by majority vote. However, a chapter should consider carefully before “instructing” a delegate how to vote since actions at the state conference or Continental Congress or information received may change drastically at the meetings. It would be impossible to instruct a delegate how to vote (on the resolutions) since these are not presented until the time for consideration.

QUESTION: Does a member serving as parliamentarian wear her pins and ribbons?

ANSWER: No. By national ruling the parliamentarian does not wear her pins and ribbons while serving; they may be worn at social functions, etc. A special pin was designed for the national and state parliamentarian and this pin alone may be worn while serving as parliamentarian. The parliamentarian’s role during the meeting is purely an advisory and consultative one—since parliamentary law gives to the chair alone the power to rule on questions of order or to answer parliamentary inquiries. During a meeting the work of the parliamentarian should be limited to giving advice to the chair and, when requested, to any other member: “A member of an assembly who acts as its parliamentarian has the same duty as the presiding officer to maintain a position of impartiality, and there does not vote on any question except in the case of (continued on page 546)

Report of Registrar General

I have the honor to present this report of application papers verified since April 18, 1994.

- Application papers received: 180
- Application papers verified: 157
- Supplemental papers received: 69

Last DAR National Number: 759270

Mrs. Burkey moved that the 157 applicants whose records have been verified by the Registrar General be elected to membership in the National Society. Adopted.

The Organizing Secretary General, Mrs. James T. Golden, Jr., gave her report.

Report of Organizing Secretary General

Through their respective State Regents the following members-at-large are now presented for confirmation as organizing regents: Mrs. Bertha Ladene Collins Davis, Blythe, California; Mrs. Bertha McCall Harten, Ogen, Iowa; Mrs. Katherine Ruth Bruffee Maleno, Greenfield, Massachusetts.

Mrs. Golden moved the confirmation of 3 organizing regents. Adopted.

The President General read a letter from the Annenberg Foundation informing the National Society that the foundation would like to offer a donation of $100,000 (to be made in three annual payments) for the renovation of Constitution Hall.

Mrs. DeVries, State Regent of New York, requested that, in the future, the Whereas clauses of the resolutions be read at Congress. The President General said that this suggestion will be taken into consideration and sent to the Resolutions Committee.

Mrs. Watkins, State Regent of Tennessee, asked when the dues raise would go into effect and how it would affect application papers which have already been sent to Headquarters but not yet approved. Mrs. Burkey responded that the dues increase went into effect immediately following the close of Congress. With regard to application papers: any papers postmarked by April 24, 1994 would require $15 in dues. If any papers are received at Headquarters with $15 in dues and a postmark later than April 24, the office will write to the chapter to request the additional $10.

The Chaplain General, Mrs. Berry, gave the closing prayer.

The meeting adjourned at 2:00 p.m.

DAR #94 SEP 509
Precious Heritage

chain with padlocks. Titled “Flag in Chains,” the display was removed by police and the art center president and museum director were arrested and tried.

Public Law 90-381, passed by the 90th Congress and approved July 5, 1968, places severe penalties for desecration of the Flag. However, the chairman said in 1984 that the Flag Code was hortatory in nature and there were no procedures for enforcement. And in 1989, Public Law 101-131, dubbed the Flag Protection Act, amended portions of the 1968 law.

Hundreds of thousands of flags and flag literature given by the Daughters continue the education process to respect the flag. Over the years, flags were sent to Czechoslovakia, Cuba, India, Switzerland, Germany, and other foreign countries on request. Flag essays, poems, articles and other DAR accomplishments for the flag are entered in Congressional Records.

Since the beginning of this century, the DAR has presented a Flag of the United States to the Senate and House of Representatives, when needed, for use at the rostrums of the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House.

The New York World’s Fair in 1964 received its main ceremonial Flag of the USA from the DAR. A garrison-sized flag, 800 square feet, for the Coliseum at the College of William and Mary, was dedicated in 1973 prior to a basketball game with 7,500 people in attendance.

A U.S. Flag, a DAR Banner and twin 50-foot flagpoles for the 17th Street entrance to Memorial Continental Hall was a Bicentennial project of the New York State Organization.

Braille flag kits are made and sold at cost by a California daughter. A Colorado Chapter prepares Flag Codes for Children. In 1980 a Certificate of Award met approval as a positive means of reinforcing the DAR’s dedication to the correct use and proper display of “The Flag of the United States of America.” It is presented to an institution or non-DAR individual. And in 1982 the Pledge of Allegiance for the Deaf in American Sign was printed.

As a 1926 chairman said, “The Flag of our Country, which first kissed the breezes of this glorious continent in the darkest days of the Revolution, represents the sufferings of yesterday, the glories of today, and the hopes of tomorrow. Standing for the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States and the history of America, it is the symbol of all we are, of all we hope to be. The importance of paying proper reverence and respect to such an emblem cannot be stressed too heavily.”

53rd Continental Congress, New York, NY, April 1944

A letter received by National Chairman, Miss Elizabeth Malott Barnes, from Dwight D. Eisenhower, Supreme Commander of the Allied Expeditionary Force, from Supreme Headquarters:

Dear Miss Barnes:

It is a real pleasure to know that a fellow citizen of my home town has undertaken such an important part as yours in teaching respect for, and the proper use of, the Flag.

I feel certain that, at least subconsciously, every American Citizen feels within himself a deep veneration for our Flag; but it is likewise true that subconscious devotion is not enough. For the American soldier in a foreign land our Flag brings to mind a very vivid and enduring concept which has little to do with the abstraction or statement of principle. The picture he sees comprehends scenes of free worship, of protected homes and, in short, of liberty loving people pursuing its daily life in tranquil security.

A glimpse of our Flag unfailingly renews within the American combat soldier that feeling of exultation that springs from the knowledge that the cause for which he is fighting is deathless, because it is just.

Please extend to your Committee, and to your whole Organization, my best wishes for unparalleled success in everything you undertake to further the cause of our country in this war.

Dwight D. Eisenhower

The Lineage Research Committee will assist you in updating old applications for any applicant who can connect with an established line within four generations (great grandparents). This request must be accompanied by a worksheet and all required proofs, including the connecting generation. At that point, the Lineage Research staff will try to verify the service of the ancestor, find locations and document dates and relationships between generations.

We hope that this assistance will encourage relatives of members, current and former, to join the DAR.

Continental Congress . . .
The 1995 Continental Congress will meet April 19–22.
Representing one of the oldest continuous hereditary societies in the nation, the New York Chapter, Sons of the American Revolution, will present its 60th annual Colonial Debutante Ball. For those interested in presenting young ladies of direct descent of Revolutionary War Patriots, please telephone (212) 206-1776 or write to New York Chapter SAR, 47 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York, 10003.

We best answer that question when we work—in our families, in our churches and synagogues, in our schools, in our neighborhood associations, and in the voluntary organizations that are the heart of America—for a renewal of the virtues that animated the founders of our republic, and that led them to pledge their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor to the cause of the American experiment in self-government.

America is not just an aggregate of individuals bearing rights. America is composed of communities that teach responsibility; of communities that sustain common memories and common commitments; of communities that provide mutual aid to those in need; of communities that nurture the moral habits that contribute to both personal flourishing and the common good. America is a community of communities.

AMERICA MUST BE PRO-FAMILY.

The most basic of these communities is the family. In renewing American democracy in its third century, let us work together for the stability and the flourishing of families. And by family, I do not mean any configuration of adults sharing living space; I mean the classic family of father, mother, and children. Law and social policy should be designed to give maximum support to families; for the health of family life is an infallible index of the health of American public life. This is not an assertion of sectarian religious or philosophical doctrine. It is an unassailable truth of empirical social science. When family life collapses, civil society collapses, and democracy along with it.

America has to become pro-family again, if America is going to fulfill the promise of her founding. Strengthening families also means reforming and renewing American education. We’re all aware that a lot of work needs to be done on this front. But my concern here is not with math and science scores, or the failure of our schools to teach our children our history, our geography, or our literature. Those are important problems. But there is another level of this debate that has to be addressed.

Education for responsible citizenship is, inescapably, moral education. We must make every effort in our schools—public, parochial, and private—to cultivate the habits of honesty, work, caring, chastity, respect for the law, mutual respect between sexes and races, and readiness for marriage, parenthood, and family. We must reject the notion that “tolerance” requires that we promote a kind of moral equivalence between what is normative and what is deviant. In a democratic society that recognizes that parents have the primary responsibility for the formation of children, schools should support, not undermine, parents in the exercise of their responsibility as moral educators.

AMERICA IS NO ACCIDENT. Despite our country’s many problems, I am bullish on America, and this is because I am bullish on the American people. God works in strange ways throughout (continued on page 549)

THE AMELIA LIGHT IS A BEACON TO A NEW CENTURY OF DAR IN FLORIDA --

The Amelia Island Lighthouse is the oldest existing structure on Amelia Island, the northernmost barrier island on Florida's East Coast. It was completed and lighted in 1839. The beam, visible 19 miles at sea, marks the Amelia-St. Mary's entrance. Whale oil originally fuelled the light which was lit at sunset and extinguished at daybreak. The clock cables with heavy weights had to be pulled each day to keep the rotation of the light going. This laborious task was continued until 1956 when the operation was finally automated.

The first keeper of Amelia Light was Amos Latham, a veteran of the Revolution who had served with the 1st Connecticut Regiment. He was born in New London County, CT on 18 July 1761 and died on Amelia Island on 23 April 1842. He and his wife, Jane, were first buried on Lighthouse property, but their remains were moved to a family plot in the city cemetery, Bosque Bello, in the 1980s. Several of his descendants continued the tradition of being keeper of the Amelia Light.

The commitment of our chapters is the key to the work of DAR. Chapters, the backbone of the National Society, breathe life into the Society’s goals and objectives, providing the essential support for its programs.

By recognizing and responding to community needs, chapters fulfill NSDAR commitments of service to God, Home and Country.

- Georgane Love

The John Rolfe Chapter proudly supports its distinguished member, Mrs. Dale Kelly Love. Grateful for its DAR heritage, this Chapter is reaching for the future with the Kemper Key.
National Parliamentarian
a ballot vote. He does not cast a deciding vote, even if his vote would affect the result, since that would interfere with the chair's prerogative of doing so. If a member feels that he cannot properly forego his right to vote in order to serve as parliamentarian, he should not accept that position."
R.O.N.R. page 458. While serving as parliamentarian, a member has no standing as a present or past officer. It is better to have the parliamentarian appointed by the president (regent) than elected by the chapter, state or National Society.

History, and while I claim no special insight into what God had in mind in 1776, I cannot believe it to be simply an accident that that year gave birth to a country that would embody in its national life the possibility of unity amidst diversity.

For all that is flawed in our democracy, we still are a model for the way in which human beings can form a free and prosperous political community out of racial, religious, and ethnic diversity. That is no mean accomplishment, as the disaster in the Balkans today reminds us. It was an accomplishment worth defending in the Cold War. And it is an accomplishment worth enhancing and developing and perfecting in America's third century.

I wish you continued enthusiasm and much success as you work toward fulfilling the heroic and noble aspirations of the founders of the Republic, whose memory you honor and whose values and virtues you do so much to help keep alive today.

AUGUST/SEPTEMBER 1994

Dear Daughters,

As summer draws to a close it is time to turn our attention to our Summer Packet and the upcoming DAR year. This year the DAR Magazine and Magazine Advertising Summer Packet was mailed separately by the Magazine Office—it is not part of the Summer Packet containing information about the rest of the DAR offices and chairmanships. The Magazine Advertising Summer Packet has been revised and we hope it is now more "user-friendly". There have also been some important changes so even if you are a seasoned chapter or state advertising chairman please read the chairman’s letter and the whole packet this year. If you have not received your copy of our packet please call the Magazine Office at (202) 879-3286 or (202) 879-3284 or write to them at the Administration Building. They will be most happy to forward a packet to you.

The DAR Magazine staff and national chairmen appreciate your suggestions and constructive criticism in our quest to make the DAR Magazine better each month. With your help we will continue with our goals.

It is a pleasure to congratulate Florida State Society, this month, as winner of our “Ad Excellence Award”.

Fondly,

Ann F. Andersen,
